I WILL NAME MURDERER

SAYS SIDNEY SMITH, COUSIN OF MISSING GIRL

Declares He Will Give State Police Evidence Which Will Clear Up Mystery of Winzola Goodell---To-morrow Posse of 1,000 Will Search for Her.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

BELCHERTOWN, July 21.—Sidney Smith, cousin of Winzola Goodell, the Dwight Village girl who has been missing two weeks, declared to-day that she had been murdered and that he could and would name her murderer.

"When the State police arrive in Belchertown and formally take charge of the case," said Smith to-day, "I will give them valuable information, which, I believe, will lead to the solution of the mystery. I will name the murderer.

"While we were dragging the pond last Saturday evening two young men stood on the east bank. One of them, whose voice I recognized, called:

"'You're losing time dragging the pond. She's not there.'

"The two men then walked to the railroad track and disappeared in the direction of Belchertown."

This is the most important statement that has as yet been made in regard to the disappearance of Postmaster Wesley Goodell's pretty daughter.

The State police, since Smith made this startling declaration, have taken charge of the investigation. State Detective James McKay is here to-day and announced, immediately on his arrival, that he would at once turn his attention to the two suspects who have been mentioned. He said:

"I will investigate these two suspects thoroughly, looking into every detail and leaving no clue unfollowed that will shed any light."

The most thorough search for the girl will be inaugurated to-morrow, when 1,000 volunteers will scour all the territory hereabouts. The reward of $100 for the finding of the body has stimulated interest, but the mystery in the case itself and the sympathy for the girl and her family are enough in themselves to rouse great interest.

Sheriff Clark has called on the deputy sheriffs throughout the county to assemble Sunday and assist in the search for the missing young woman.

One man under suspicion is about twenty-five years old and is now living in Belchertown. He is said to be not always responsible for his actions. This young man also knew Winzola Goodell very well, and is acquainted with her family.

SECOND SUSPECT WATCHED.

Another young man, also a resident of this place, and who is known to have been friendly with the girl, is also under the eyes of the police. He has been shadowed for the past forty-eight hours so closely that not a move has escaped the police, and so quietly that no one in the town has realized it. This young man has also figured in the search for the missing girl. Both are so guarded that if they should attempt to leave the place, they would be placed under arrest.

The actions of the two men suspected of knowing something about the disappearance of the girl are so innocent, and both have been so closely identified with the search, that the police are puzzled. The only thing that would warrant decisive action would be the disappearance of either or both of the young men.

The searchers to-morrow will go out in squads of ten, each in charge of a leader.

In this manner they will start at the edge of Upper Pond on the east side, near where the piece of ribbon now identified as belonging to Winnie Goodell was found. The searchers will spread along the shore and work into the woods, each man having a space of thirty feet to go over.

They will work up the mountain side and into what is known as Kelley's woods, and at this point, several hundred acres having been gone over, the search in the woods will end. Then the work of dragging the ponds will be resumed, and dynamite will be exploded along the shores in the hope of causing the body to rise to the surface, if it be now in the pond.

The strange man mentioned in the case who was seen by Howard Thrasher and two others at Upper Pond on the same day that Winnie Goodell disappeared, is believed to have been traced as far as the station at Dwight, where Mr. Goodell is station agent. It is believed that he boarded a freight train there that same evening and went toward Boston. No other trace can be found of his movements.

FATHER A SPIRITUALIST.

Wesley Goodell, father of the missing girl, is a Spiritualist, and firmly believes in the transmigration of souls. To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day Mr. Goodell said that while he could not say whether his daughter was slain and buried in the woods or thrown into the pond, he is sure that her spirit still lives, and that he will be able to get into communication with her soon.

"This is the only thing that consoles me," said Mr. Goodell. "As yet Winnie has not talked in the spirit way, but I am trying to reach her, and if she is dead I know she will let me know through her spirit."

Stafford Case to Go to Higher Court

RICH WIDOW CALLED AT DEATH HEARING

Mrs. Mary Sutton Questioned as to Killing of Her Chauffeur by Butler Ruby.

Trial Justice Frye Announces That the Superior Court Will Consider Evidence.

Special to the Boston American.

NORTH ANDOVER, July 21.—Mrs. Mary Hasbrook Sutton, the millionaire widow of General Eben Sutton, was compelled to come into the police court to-day and testify at a suddenly called continuance of the inquest into the death of her chauffeur, Reginald Stafford, who was shot and killed at "Hill Crest," the Sutton home, by Edward Ruby, the butler, at midnight on June 10.

The testimony of Mrs. Suton, who is said to have esteemed the unfortunate young chauffeur highly, has long been wanted. At the first inquest hearing, July 14, she was not present. The inquest was continued to August 11, "in order that Mrs. Sutton might be present," according to the announcement given out. To-day the inquest was unexpectedly renewed. Mrs. Sutton was one of the witnesses. At the close of to-day's hearing Trial Justice Frye announced that the hearings were ended, so far as he was concerned. Then he made this significant remark:

Go to Superior Court.

"The case will go to the Superior Court in September."

District Attorney W. Scott Peters of Essex county, who came here from his home in Haverhill to-day and questioned the witnesses at the inquest, said, at its close:

"I will await the finding of Judge Frye. Now that I have all the evidence, I will go over it and take such further steps as I deem warranted by it."

The suddenness of this continued inquest to-day, the apearance of Mrs. Sutton as one of the witnesses and the statement of Trial Justice Frye that the case would go to the Superior Court form sensational developments in a case that has had several mysterious features.

Edward Ruby, the butler who shot and killed Stafford, testified in court at the police hearing that he took Stafford for a burgler. He said that he was sitting up with Orlando, another butler, and that they heard a noise down stairs. They went down and saw the feet of a man sticking out from under a sofa. Ruby fired two shots and Stafford, the young chauffeur, rolled out from under the sofa, dead. Ruby was not only discharged by Trial Justice Frye at this preliminary hearing, but was complimented by him in open court upon his alertness and vigilance in defence of his employer's home.

Ruby Not at Hearing.

Repeated declarations by Stafford's mother and brothers that he was not mistaken for a burglar, caused District Attorney Peters to investigate the matter, resulting in an inquest begun on July 14. Ruby, who had disappeared soon after being discharged, appeared at the inquest July 14 and told his story again. Orlando, the other butler, Mrs. Sutton's daughter, Mrs. John H. Scoville, and five servants also testified. Then came the continuance to August 11.

To-day's surprises, however, came when District Attorney Peters came in on the morning train, went to the police court and held consultation with Judge Frye. Then the inquest was continued, in secret as before.

Mrs. Sutton, whose appearance caused such a sensation, was closely questioned by District Attorney Peters. Her daughter, Mrs. Scoville, testified anew, as did John H. Scoville, Orlando and Hilfria Diemera, Mrs. Sutton's French maid.

Ruby was not present, nor were any of the Stafford family. The latter had not been notified.

After the hearing to-day District Attorney Peters hurried over to Lawrence and was closeted with Judge Mahoney of the Lawrence Police Court. They denied later that their conference concerned the Stafford case.

BAY STATE MANAGERS OFF TO JAMESTOWN

Three members of the Massachusetts board of managers of the Jamestown Exposition sailed from Boston this afternoon to visit Norfolk, Va. The members are General Francis H. Appleton of Peabody, Hon. William H. Fairbanks of Warren and Arthur Lord of Plymouth. The commissioners were accompanied by the board's architect, John Lavalle, who is to design the Massachusetts building.

EDISON CO. SUBMITS RATES TO DIFFERENT CUSTOMERS, BUT WANTS THEM KEPT SECRET

Great discrimination against certain Boston consumers by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company is shown by the report, long demanded by Representative James H. Mellen and finally filed with the Clerk of the House to-day by the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, on the prices of electricity in this city.

Some of the varying rates charged by the company are as follows in the report, the time of readings being from January 8 to February 6.

Hurried to Printers.

The report was filed with the clerk shortly before the State House closed to-day, and was almost immediately hurried to the office of the State printers. It is an entailed mass of figures, tending more to confuse than enlighten the public.

Whether or not the Edison Electric Illuminating Company has been guilty of discrimination the public is left to infer from a study of the figures—the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners makes no comparison. Its report consists of scores of typewritten sheets of foolscap containing the names of over 150 consumers with the number of kilowatt hours of light power furnished together with the net bill. The figures cover a given period between two readings of the meters, January 8 and February 6.

An interesting thing about the report is found in the copy of all the correspondence which passed between the Board and the Edison Company, and furnished possibly one of the reasons why the Board, in a communication to the House June 23, said that it "thought it inexpedient and unnecessary" to give the figures out.

Objects to Publicity.

This letter, which accompanied the figures requested by the Board, was written by J. Otis Wardwell, better known as "Jake" Wardwell, the noted lobbyist, and is as follows:

Boston, Mass., June 1, 1906.
Forrest E. Barker, Chairman Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, State House, Boston.

Dear Sir: In submitting the enclosed data for your examination and consideration, I desire to have the attitude of the company with respect to the matter definitely understood. We have never failed, and never intend to fail, in furnishing the board with all the information about the business of the company to which the board may feel itself entitled, nor do we desire to attempt to determine whether the information called for in this or any other instance is within the terms of the statute requiring such information to be given. We are clear, however, that there is a line beyond which the board should not go in making public the information furnished, or giving the benefit of it to any other purpose or interest.

The present is such an instance. While the board is welcome to all the facts and figures contained in the elaborate statements submitted herewith, we have decided objection to their coming to the knowledge of any outsider, particularly that of any competitor. Exhibiting as they do the details of our most important business, including the names of customers, the amounts of current furnished and prices charged therefor, it is manifest that these schedules in the hands of a competitor, promotor or any other hostile interest might seriously prejudice the company and the public. If A knows precisely what B charges C, it is very easy for A to get the business away from B.

"These scandals are therefore submitted with the distinct understanding that no such use is to be made of them, as above suggested, and I am confident that the fairness of this position will be recognized by every member of your Board.

Yours very respectfully,
J. OTIS WARDELL."

MAYOR VETOES RIVAL PHONES

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, July 21.—Mayor James B. Casey of this city to-day vetoed the order passed by the Board of Aldermen, granting a franchise to the Independent Telephone Company, a new concern which sought to operate here in opposition to the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Talk of graft in regard to the telephone bill was widespread here during the time that the matter of the franchise was before the City Council. When the bill came to the Mayor he sent postal cards to all telephone subscribers, asking if they preferred a new company in opposition to the present service. The replies were 2,126 against and 202 in favor.

30 HOSPITAL MEN STRIKE

Thirty colored porters employed at the Boston City Hospital struck to-day for a raise in their wages. The porters, who have been receiving $1 a day, to-day went to Steward Herman Mackay and told him that if their wages were not raised they would quit work. They were told that they were getting all that would be paid, so the men packed up their personal effects and left the institution. It is expected that their places will be filled by to-night.

PROVIDENCE AFTER ICE MEN.

PROVIDENCE, July 21.—The Board of Trade yesterday decided to investigate the Ice Trust in this city and to prosecute the men accused of entering into a combine to more than double prices this Summer.

RAIN GIVES FIRST RELIEF FROM HEAT

Shower Shortly After Noon Cools the Atmosphere Four Degrees.

PROSTRATIONS.

Bronkhost, John, aged sixty-six, No. 204 Harrison avenue; fell from wagon, taken to the City Hospital; will recover.

Robertson, Alfred, aged thirty-six, single, No. 5 Hammond street; fell from wagon, receiving scalp wound and concussion of the brain; taken to the City Hospital.

Rain, which began falling in Boston shortly after noon to-day, cooled the atmosphere four degrees between 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock this afternoon. The weather bureau promises that occasional showers will continue throughout the night and during the early portion of the day to-morrow.

To-day's weather started out even worse than yesterday, the humidity being almost unbearable, with the temperature at 78 degrees at 10 o'clock and still going up.

The first prostration recorded was that of John Bronkhost, sixty-six years old, of No. 204 Harrison avenue. While driving a team at the corner of Harrison avenue and Rochester street at 9:25 he fell from his seat. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found that he had sustained severe contusions of the head and hip and had dislocated his right shoulder.

The forecast for to-day is: Generally cloudy, with possibly occasional showers to-night, Sunday cloudy, light variable winds.

Humidity To-day 86.

This is much the same sort of weather, only worse, that has been prevalent in Boston, and, in fact, all over the country east of the Rocky Mountains for several days. To-morrow the weather while likely to be threatening, will not interfere with excursionists, for showers are not looked for, and even if they should come they will be light.

To-day is not so pleasant nor healthful as yesterday, owing to the greater humidity. To-day it is 86 per cent.—very high—while yesterday it was about 79 per cent.

The coolest place in the country is Yellowstone Park, where the temperature is but 48 degrees. The hottest places reported to the Weather Bureau are Galveston and Key West where the thermometer indicates 82 degrees heat.

REVEAL MURDER OF 20 YEARS AGO

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 21.—A report by Dr. Davis, medical referee, has disclosed what is believed to be a murder mystery more than a score of years old. The skeleton of a man was found last Tuesday, near the highway between this city and Nashua, at the Litchfield town line. Dr. Davis made an investigation and reported that the man had met a violent death.

MEXICO FEARS REVOLUTION

LAREDO, Tex., July 21. That there is trouble of a most serious kind brewing beyond the Rio Grande there is now no longer doubt. The air is full of rumors of uprisings, strikes, and even revolution is freely mentioned.

Circulars posted in every public place warn the "Gringoes" that every American found in the republic after September 16, the Mexican independence day, will be driven into the sea. The burden of the cry in the circulars is, "Mexico for Mexicans."

A great strike of all the laboring classes in the country is proclaimed for September 16.

PAID $5 FINE FOR PROFANITY IN PARK

Declaring that the public parks of the city were made for men, women and children, and that they were entitled to police protection from rowdyism and insult, Judge Joseph D. Fallon of the South Boston Municipal Criminal Court to-day fined George Wheeler, aged thirty, of No. 204 H street, South Boston, $5 for profane language and uttering loud cries on the Strandway, near City Point, on July 17.

Police Keep Close Watch on Young Men, Who Know Arrest Would Follow Any Suspicious Move on Their Part.

Mr. Goodell explained that he could not believe that his daughter had run away with any man, and does not believe that Professor Bartlett, of Hampton University, Virginia, is in any way concerned in her disappearance, through their being sweethearts.

"Winnie had no love troubles," said her father. "She was always happy and carefree, and it is not possible that she had any trouble which would have caused her to drown herself. Her mother and myself would have known of any such thing."

GIRL'S MOTHER PROSTRATED.

Mrs. Goodell, mother of the girl, is prostrated by the mysteries of the case and the general belief that her child has been murdered. She is ill in bed and requires the attention of a physician.

Sidney Smith, a cousin of the girl, who is visiting here from Norwich, Ct., is the young man who found the bit of ribbon on the bushes and who has been one of the most active searchers. He is working among the searchers with that idea uppermost, and declares that he is convinced the body will be found there before the search of Sunday is concluded.

While Sheriff Barton will not admit that he believes the same as Smith, he has paid close attention to all the theories this young man has advanced, and has talked with him in the hope that some clue might suggest itself in the course of their conversation.

One of the last persons known to have seen Miss Goodell alive is William Kennedy, who keeps a small store here. He says that on the day preceding her disappearance, July 5, she called at his store, and that they talked on general matters for some time.

"FEW WOULD CARE ABOUT ME."

In the course of their talk, Mr. Kennedy told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, he mentioned the parties, socials and the like that she was in the habit of attending, and that the conversation turned to boating and swimming. Winnie told him that she was going boating on Upper Pond the next day, the day on which she left home.

"I asked her," says Mr. Kennedy, "if she could swim, and she replied that she could not. Then I told her that she had better not go, or that if she did, she had better have a man with her who could swim in case the boat should capsize.

"To this Winnie said: 'It would not be much of a loss if I were to drown. There are only a few who would care about me, anyway.'"

The theory that she could have any intention of suicide, however, does not meet with general approval. It is believed that her conversation with Kennedy was more in the nature of careless joking than anything else.

MYSTERY IN NAME WRITTEN ON WALL

Special to the Boston American.

BELCHERTOWN, July 21.—One of the developments which shows that Winnie Goodell was in the habit of frequenting the shores of the ponds was the discovery yesterday of her name written on the outside of the Schillaire cottage, which stands upon the banks of the Upper Pond and which is within a few yards of the spot where it is believed she was drowned, by those who insist that she met her fate that way.

Plainly written in lead pencil on the side of this cottage and readily deciphered, is the name of the missing young woman, Winzola Goodell, and above it another name which has been so obliterated that it is quite impossible to make it out. Only a few letters of this name above that of Miss Goodell are discernible but they are evidently in the same handwriting as the lower name.

This has been positively identified by Mr. Goodell as his daughter's chirography.

Sydney Smith, cousin of the girl, who yesterday made the important discovery of the white ribbon and the scene of some mysterious struggle, together with several others, declared, after having closely examined the name above that of Miss Goodell, that it was meant for Leon Schillare.

Leon Schillare is one of the four young men who occupied the cottage which belongs to his father on the nights immediately following the one on which the young girl so strangely dropped out of sight. He is the son of A. J. Schillare, a photographer of Northampton.

Mr. Schillare, when interviewed to-day, said emphatically:

"The relations between my boy and Miss Goodell were only those of a son to a daughter of friends of his father.

"The Goodells and my family are old friends. My boy is only eighteen and never kept company with Miss Goodell. Leon was not at the cottage on the day of the girl's disappearance; he was here in Northampton and at the studio the greater part of the afternoon.

"If that was Leon's name that you speak of above that of Miss Goodell I know nothing of it. There have been several names in the past written on the outer wall of the cottage."

The police, however, attach considerable significance to the peculiar writing on the wall. The signatures are of recent origin.

SEEK GIRL'S LETTER TO HER SWEETHEART

BELCHERTOWN, July 21.—Wesley Goodell, father of Winzola M. Goodell, who disappeared from home July 6, is anxiously awaiting to-day for the letter to be mailed back to him which his daughter wrote to Professor Frank A. Bartlett, her sweetheart, at Hampden Institute, Virginia, on the morning she left home.

Professor Bartlett had been home in Belchertown on a vacation. He returned to Virginia a few days before Miss Goodell disappeared. Miss Goodell rode with him to Amherst and kissed him goodby as he boarded his train.

The morning of July 6 she wrote to Bartlett. She posted the letter in the post-office at Dwight Village, where her father is postmaster. Then she started out for a row on Upper Pond. She has not been seen since.

The day after Winzola disappeared Mr. Goodell wrote to Bartlett, informing him of the case. Bartlett wrote back July 9 as follows:

> "Your letter informing me of the awful accident received. It is an awful shock to me. It cannot seem possible that it can be true. You all have my deepest sympathy. I cannot say any more at this time.
>
> "Yours sincerely,
>
> "FRANK A. BARTLETT."

A few days ago Mr. Goodell wrote to Professor Bartlett again. This time he requested him to mail back to him the letter which his daughter wrote to Bartlett on the morning of her disappearance. He hopes that it may throw some light on her mental condition. The question has been raised that Miss Goodell might have had a quarrel with Bartlett before he left or that she might have been despondent at his returning to Virginia.

An answer from Bartlett is expected by to-day. There is no question in Mr. Goodell's mind but what Bartlett will return the letter if it is still in his possession.

DUMA COWED BY TROOPS IN ST. PETERSBURG

Czar, Controlled by Triumvirate, Goes Completely Over to Reactionaries.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 21.—Troops are again in control of St. Petersburg, the Duma and the people are cowed by soldiers, and the Czar has gone completely over to the reactionary influences which have steadfastly combatted the revolution and are practically in complete control.

M. Pobiedonostseff, former procurator general of the Holy Synod, Count Ignatieff, former Minister of the Interior, and General Trepoff compose a triumvirate which is practically running the government. Nicholas is taking the advice of these men on every subject and is not making any important move without first consulting them. General Trepoff is the chief of the triumvirate.

The presence of the great numbers of troops in the city has acted as a complete check for revolutionary activity. The Duma made no attempt yesterday to assert itself. The people submitted quietly in the face of the preparations made to put down any disorders which might be attempted.

The backdown of the Duma in changing its appeal has caused the greatest chagrin to the revolutionary elements. They consider the defeat which the reform parties have met in this case as one of the most serious blows yet suffered by their cause.

A new fear has arisen to add to the strain under which the people exist. This is that the Socialist deputies in the Duma will issue a proclamation to the peasants causing the Czar to dissolve the Duma, which would probably bring on a conflict between the revolutionists and the government.

Advices received to-day state that the situation at Syzran, the town in the government of Simbirsk which was burned, is desperate. Syzran has ceased to exist, having been completely wiped out by fire. Many deaths have occurred in the conflagration.

MORAN NAILS CAMPAIGN YARN AS FALSEHOOD

Denies Statement That He Would Ignore Socialist Support for Governor.

BROCKTON, July 21.—The Brockton Searchlight prints a letter from J. B. Moran in response to a request for information as to whether or not he would accept the nomination for Governor on the Socialist ticket.

In this letter, Mr. Moran says:

> I know the rules of the party, and I know that that party, by virtue of its rules, can nominate nobody upon its ticket who is not a member of the party. I know that these rules exclude me from a nomination.
>
> I have been personally acquainted with, and have been attorney for many Socialists. I recognize them to be honest, enthusiastic men and firm believers in the principles which they advocate, and I honor them for the bold manner in which they announce their principles and for the energy in which they make contest for them.
>
> In my recent contest for District Attorney I have reason to believe that I received several thousand votes for that office from Socialists in Suffolk County.
>
> You may state in the most positive manner, printing this letter in full if you so desire, that the statement which you refer to, to wit, "that Moran would not accept the Socialist nomination for Governor," is an absolutely unfounded falsehood.
>
> Undoubtedly during the campaign the press subsidized by capital will spread broadcast falsehoods equally vicious and equally unfounded. When called to my attention I will endeavor to expose them.
>
> Thanking you for your letter, I am,
>
> Sincerely yours,
>

NEW BEDFORD FACES BIG TROLLEY STRIKE

NEW BEDFORD, July 21.—This city faces a big trolley tie-up to-day as a result of a unanimous vote to strike passed by the Carmen's Union following the refusal of President Crapo of the Union Street Railway Company and the Dartmouth & Westport Street Railway, who met a committee of the union and District Organizer Fitzgerald, to have anything to do with the agreement the union presented.

Another conference will be sought with President Crapo to-day, and if the railway officials here refuse to meet the union representatives, who will be accompanied to the conference by Mayor Coughlin of Fall River, president of District 274, Street Carmen's Association, and District Organizer Fitzgerald, it is predicted that the cars will stop running.

District Organizer Fitzgerald said to-day:

"New Bedford is on the verge of one of the biggest trolley strikes ever seen about this part of the country."

For the past week many cars have had new men on the forward platforms, being broken in as motormen, showing that the company is preparing for a strike.

ACCUSE BANK CLERK OF THEFT

NEW YORK, July 21.—Edward Frost, aged forty-two, of No. 1,791 Lexington avenue, a clerk in the National Park Bank at No. 214 Broadway, was arrested early to-day, charged with having stolen $150 of the bank's funds.

The complaint against Frost was made by Maurice H. Ewer, assistant cashier. Ewer refused to say anything beyond the fact that the bank had good reason to believe that Frost had taken the money as charged. From the police it was learned that Frost had been under surveillance at the bank for some weeks.

SINGER'S VOICE HUSHED; ACTORS FOLLOW HEARSE

Wonderland Employes in Line at Imposing Funeral of Pete Randall.

"RUBE" DIED IN HARNESS

Pete Randall, the singer, known in private life as Peter O'Hare, was honored in death to-day by the most imposing funeral pageant South Boston has seen in years.

It was a Wonderland funeral, for when he died of heart failure at Revere Beach last Thursday, Pete Randall was taking part in a Wonderland performance, playing Rube in the spectacle, "Fire and Flames."

Death came suddenly to Rube behind the scenes, where friendly hands had carried him from the "Fire and Flames" square. A fall so realistic that it called forth uproarious laughter and applause had almost stunned Rube and caused him to writhe in excruciating pain. With the ghost of a smile on his lips and the tumult of the fire-fighting brigade ringing in his ears Pete Randall pressed his hand over his heart and closed his eyes in the dreamless sleep of death.

Actors in Funeral Line.

To-day's funeral was a great and remarkable outpouring of unaffected grief on the part of Wonderland's employes for a popular fellow employe who had died at the post of duty.

After services in St. James's Church, where the voice of the dead singer had often been an inspiration to the devout, the funeral procession formed on Harrison avenue in front of the church. The procession on foot was three blocks long and the carriages strung along for another block.

Wonderland's police and firemen—all in uniform—led the procession. After them marched a small army of barkers, fakirs, musicians and supes from the various side shows at Revere Beach. In the carriages were representatives of the Elks, White Rats, Eagles and Knights of Pythias, and half a dozen tender-hearted theatrical women who made no pretence at controlling their emotion.

Friends Bought His Grave.

In the hearse with the casket was a thousand dollars' worth of flowers—simple little laurel wreaths and fantastically elaborate designs, "the best in the market," explained "Sandy" Chapman, grand marshal of the funeral procession, "for there was nothing too good for Pete."

"He was the whitest man in the business," continued Mr. Chapman, who is himself a singer of local fame, and his funeral proved his popularity. He was only fifty-two years old and sang with the Olympic Quartet for a quarter of a century. But he was a man with a boy's heart—always sunny and hopeful and always ready to reach out a helping hand to a neighbor in distress. He never turned his back on a friend and I don't know that he ever had any enemies."

With pathetic solemnity Wonderland's funeral procession moved on to Hollywood Cemetery, where Pete Randall, the singer, was left in a grave purchased by his friends, for he died without a dollar.

NOTED HORSES MAY MEET IN MENTAL TEST

An intellectual contest between the two greatest trained horses in the world is being talked of at Wonderland. A challenge has been issued, and it is not out of the bounds of probability that the Princess Trixie and Jim Key will meet in mental combat at the beautiful electric city at Revere before the season closes.

Such a rivalry would interest the whole country, for both horses are famous for what they know and do. They have delighted large audiences all over the country, and a contest for supremacy between them would be one of the strangest and most interesting things imaginable.

"I have challenged the owner of Jim Key and have offered to put up $1,000 that my horse will prove superior to his," said William H. Barnes, the owner of Princess Trixie, to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

"I am not afraid to back Trixie for any amount of money, but the owner of Jim Key seems to fear to back his horse, for he has not excepted my challenge for a contest. Trixie is ready to meet Jim Key here and now, or anywhere and at any time and his owner knows it. He wrote me in reply to my challenge that Jim Key would not meet my horse, but that he had another one in training which would.

Ready at Any Time.

"The absurdity of calling Jim Key a champion is apparent, for he has never contested for honors, and how can any horse or man be a champion without contesting? I know what Jim Key does, and I know what Trixie does and can do. I am ready to have her go on the same stage with Jim Key, and I know that she will do every one of his acts without any rehearsing, and then go through with her own far more difficult and entertaining performance.

"Jim Key's owner knows that, too, but he is hanging back very strangely. I am willing at any time he wishes to have my horse compete with his, and if I can arrange it, we will have the contest right here in Wonderland before the season closes."

Trixie has thousands of friends and the children are no greater admirers of the wonderful horse than are their parents and grown up friends. She has never associated with horses in her life, says Mr. Barnes, and she knows far more about people and the English language than the ordinary visitor at one of her performances would imagine.

Children Gave Her Bath.

"Why Trixie and my children have all grown up together," says Mr. Barnes. "I have had her since she was a baby and all of my children have played with her just the same as though she was a member of the family, and indeed she is.

"When Princess Trixie was a child, a colt, I mean, she had the run of our house, and the children have even had her in the bathtub for a bath on Saturdays. She will do anything for them and understands everything we say to her. She is a thinker. Her daily performances show anyone that, but if she is seen day after day her almost human intelligence is comprehended more and more.

"Trixie is just like people. The weather affects her very much, and she has her 'off' days just like athletes or thinkers. Some days she is as bright as a dollar, and then, if the weather is sticky and muggy, she is slow to understand and sometimes lazy. It is strange. I don't know myself just how much that horse of mine really does know."

HIS MOTHER WILL INSIST ON INSANITY PLEA

Slayer of Stanford White Declares He Will Face Trial On Merits of Case.

SEEK ALIENISTS' PAPERS

NEW YORK, July 21.—The mother and other relatives of Harry Thaw, charged with murder in the first degree in killing Stanford White, are determined to have him declared insane, and thus make him escape the electric chair despite Thaw's declared resolve to go before the jury as a man of sound mind and face the issue on the merits of the case.

Thaw has been examined by alienists. If he fails to yield to his mother's persuasion to accept the insanity plea, then the report of the alienists will be taken before the Supreme Court and the appointment of a commission in insanity will be asked. This, if secured, will take the case out of the hands of the prosecution altogether.

Mrs. William Thaw and her daughter, Mrs. Carnegie, visited Harry Thaw to-day. They arrived at 11 o'clock, having come in an electric hansom from Mrs. Carnegie's Summer home on Long Island. Both women were dressed in black. They were taken upstairs soon as they passed inspection by the matron.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw arrived at the prison about ten minutes after the other visitors. She went up to Thaw's cell at once and joined the family party.

Lawyer Clifford W. Hartridge called on his client some time before Thaw's family arrived, but remained for only about ten minutes.

Thaw's mother made a last strong appeal to her son to permit her to direct his fight for his life.

But the attitude of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw toward her mother-in-law indicated that in spite of the fact that she joined the family council the elder and the younger woman were still opposing each other, Evelyn siding with her husband in his insistence upon a trial by jury and not by insanity experts.

Declare Thaw Insane.

The effort of Thaw's counsel, Clifford W. Hartridge, to obtain all the papers in the Thaw case from former Judge Olcott, whose law firm was dismissed by Thaw because it was the purpose to enter an insanity plea as his defence, has brought it out that the alienists who were retained by Judge Olcott made no written reports yet. Should Justice McLean on Monday order former Judge Olcott to turn over all the papers in the Thaw case to Mr. Hartridge there will be no records from the alienists.

No secret is made of the fact that Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton and Dr. Charles L. Dana, the alienist, have told Judge Olcott that Thaw is insane. Judge Olcott has announced, as these two alienists are now under retainer by Mrs. William Thaw, that when their written reports are made they will not pass out of his possession.

May Appoint Guardian.

It may be that, prior to a request for an insanity commission, Mrs. Thaw will go before the court and seek appointment as a guardian of her son's person on the ground that he is mentally incompetent and without funds. Should the courts appoint her as a guardian she would be in position to ask for the appointment of a sanity commission.

While the White family will take no direct action or make any co-operative move with the Thaw family in the appointment of a commission, it is understood that they will not oppose the appointment of a commission.

Mrs. Stanford White will leave for Europe early in August and remain abroad until after the Thaw case has been disposed of.

Outside legal talent was brought into the Thaw defence yesterday when E. J. Lichtenwalner, of Allentown, Pa., was retained by Judge Olcott's firm at Mrs. William Thaw's request. He is considered an expert on emotional insanity as a defence plea, having won particular fame by his success in the Bechtel murder case two or three years ago.

Fight for Papers.

Thaw yesterday gave new instructions to Lawyer Hartridge to continue the fight in the Supreme Court to gain all the alienists' papers.

Thaw told his counsel that he would not be satisfied until everything had been done to show that Judge Olcott's firm had nothing to do with the case, and suggested applying for a writ of prohibition or some other remedy to prevent Judge Olcott's firm from doing anything more in his case.

Thaw does not believe that his mother will make any move to have him sent to an insane asylum prior to his trial, in spite of all she has told him.

Mrs. Thaw had told him she did not think him competent to direct his affairs, but he laughed at the idea and tried to convince her that he knew exactly what he was doing. He said Hartridge understood the case better than anyone else in the world, and that he never had told Judge Olcott the real facts because Judge Olcott had acted as if he did not think Thaw in his right mind.

Thaw does not believe that his mother will call soon at the prison again. He spoke to her in an angry tone when she insisted that he should retain Judge Olcott's firm.

"It will be Hartridge or nobody," said Thaw.

"You have had your own way long enough, Harry," said Mrs. Thaw, and she went away.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, his wife, is his chief sympathizer and reliance. Next week they will prepare a joint statement for Lawyer Hartridge, giving every detail of the circumstances and incidents which led to the killing of White.

SICK MARINES BROUGHT HERE

The United States cruiser Columbia arrived in Boston to-day from Colon, bringing sixty-eight marines, all ill with malaria, which they contracted while acting as police in Colon and the canal zone in June and early in July.

Forty of the sick men, their faces sunken and yellow, were taken to the Chelsea Naval Hospital, and the others remain on board. Two are so bad that they were not moved. They are Lieutenant Ray and Private Sisk.

When the Columbia reached San Juan there were 197 cases on board, but in cooler weather the number dropped to sixty-eight.

Mr. Creed will have for his principal opponent Alderman Frank J. Linehan.

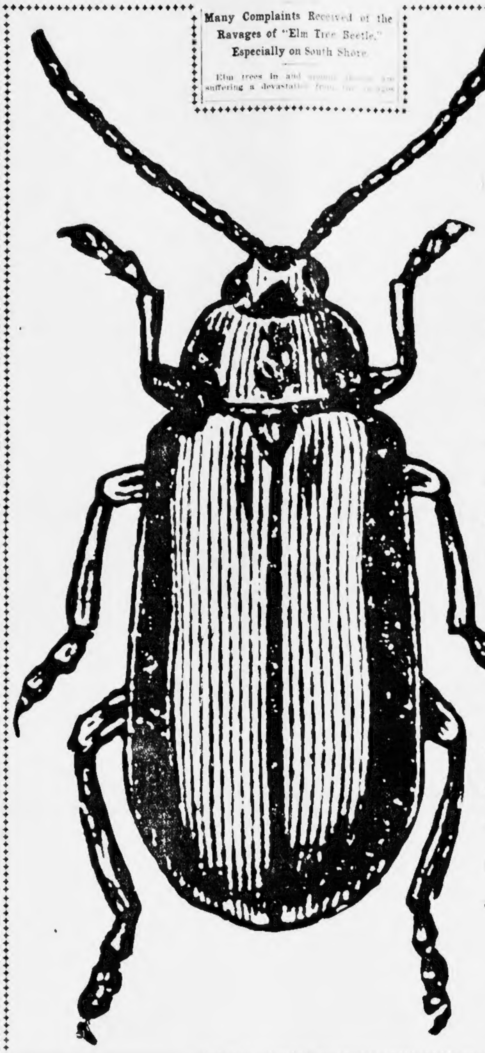
INSECT PEST THREATENS THE DESTRUCTION OF ELM TREES

Many Complaints Received of the Ravages of "Elm Tree Beetle," Especially on South Shore.

Elm trees in and around Boston are suffering a devastation from the ravages



Elm Tree Beetle, latest insect pest which threatens all elm trees, and which is now being fought in and near Boston, magnified to ten times actual size.

from the elm tree beetle, which, if not stopped at once, Superintendent A. H. Kirkland of the gypsy moth bureau declares, will end in the final destruction of the trees themselves. Mr. Kirkland estimates that it will take these insects but two or three years to complete the task they have already started upon.

It is only the elm trees that are thus doomed, for the beetles do not touch any other tree. If they are not killed off at once they will lay their eggs under the leaves, and come out again by millions next Spring.

It would be next year that the beetles would do the real damage. The trees can stand having the leaves eaten away at this time, but when the buds and sprouts come out next Spring and the beetles eat them that will end the foliage so far as that season is concerned. It would then be a ponderous task to rid the trees of the pests.

South Shore in Trouble.

The trees would have to be thoroughly scraped and given a wash of poison before the eggs could be killed. The breeding of these bugs is inestimable. Their progeny in a season counts up into the millions.

Last year the same beetle did considerable damage, but it was then passed without notice in many cases. The city trees were all treated, and the ravages in that section checked.

Not only is Boston severely affected, but Brookline and Watertown are hit hard. Other places which have to-day reported an invasion on the part of these insects are the Newtons, Dedham, Weymouth, Hingham, Plymouth, Taunton, Bridgewater, Middleboro and Brockton, all the smaller towns on the South Shore as well as many places just to the north and west of Boston.

Several Broods a Summer.

The elm-leaf beetle was imported from Europe as early as 1837, and in appearance very much resembles the striped cucumber beetle. The caterpillar is almost cylindrical, yellowish black with black spots and a wide yellow line along the back and sides. It is destructive to the foliage from May until August, skeletonizing the leaves.

When full grown it falls or crawls to the ground, changes to a chrysalis under the leaves in crevices of the sidewalk or at the base of the trees. While the beetles, of which there are several broods a Summer, are also injurious to the leaves, they are by no means so destructive as their caterpillars.

It is in the true beetle form that the insect makes the small perforations in the leaves which so resemble shot holes. The beetle feeds upon the upper surface of the leaf, lays its eggs upon the under surface in groups of four or five up to twenty and more. The eggs are oblong, oval and pointed at the tip. They are straw yellow in color, and as they are grouped each egg forms a perfect hexagon. The eggs hatch in about one week.

Succumbs to Poisons.

The larvae feed upon the under surface of the elm leaves, skeletonizing them and causing them to turn brown, wither and drop from the tree. The pupae are brighter, yellower than the larvae and are covered with moderately long but very conspicuous black bristles. The pupal state lasts from six to ten days.

In former years the elm-leaf beetle was more select in its taste than it now seems to be, and is said to have troubled only the English elms, but now it is credited with ravages upon the native variety.

In the case of the elm-leaf beetle there is no known parasite to destroy it, and spraying with poisonous solutions is the only manner in which it can be effectively destroyed. The elm-leaf beetle succumbs readily to many mild forms of poison solution.

SON OF JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN WEDS BEAUTY

LONDON, July 21.—Austen Chamberlain, son of Joseph Chamberlain, and Miss Ivy Muriel, daughter of Colonel Dundas, were married to-day at St. Margaret's, in the presence of a large assemblage of the fashionables of London. Mrs. Chamberlain, stepmother of the groom, was present, accompanied by Miss Chamberlain and Miss Endicott, but Joseph Chamberlain could not attend. Prominent in the assembly were leading politicians of both parties, including former Premier Arthur J. Balfour and Herbert Asquith.

The marriage was one of the events of the social season, and great crowds of people gathered about Westminster to witness the entry of the notable guests and the wedding party.

Mrs. Chamberlain, the stepmother of Austen Chamberlain, was Miss Mary Endicott, daughter of the famous Endicott family of the Witch City. She is expected in Salem soon, and it is probable, according to cable dispatches from London to-day, that her stepson and his bride will follow her across the water. Salem and Boston society are a-flutter with anticipation of the prospect of entertaining such distinguished guests from England.

The couple whose marriage took place to-day is a notable one, even for London. Young Mr. Chamberlain has made a decided mark for himself in English politics. He is a member of Parliament and a former chancellor of the exchequer.

He recently made a voyage to Africa for his health. In Algiers he met Miss Dundas. She is the daughter of Colonel H. L. Dundas, late of the East Yorkshire Regiment, and now chief staff officer at Gibraltar. She is a tall, fair-complexioned girl of the finest English type and is known as "the Beauty of the Army." She was shopping in Algiers in company with a friend, Mrs. Bodly, with whom young Chamberlain was acquainted. Chamberlain happened to enter the shop where the two ladies were. An introduction followed. It was "love at first sight." The rising young statesman, who had hitherto shown no indication toward marriage, wooed Miss Dundas persistently.

The marriage resulting to-day from this courtship is aptly styled by the London set as a true love match and a union of brains and beauty.

CARDINAL GIBBONS TELLS CURE FOR PUBLIC EVILS

Prelate Pleads for Higher Standards of Family Life as Only Preventive of Corporation Crimes.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—In an interview to-day Cardinal Gibbons, who is resting in the Shinnecock Hills on Long Island with Bishop Foley of Detroit, was asked: "What is the remedy for the social and civic unhealthfulness that is giving occupation now to so many muckrakers?"

"That is comprehensive," he replied. "I would rather attempt to answer a dozen specific questions, but I think I may answer this by saying, that when the sanctity of the marriage tie and the obligation of family relations are more fully realized and religious training in the family becomes more general, we may look for better conditions.

"Dissect these questions as we may, we are forced back again and again to the same conclusion. Moral and religious training in the family is essential, and just as it is neglected do these evils increase.

The Chief Civic Evils

"By civic evils we refer to corporate greed, financial immorality and official infidelity, as in the case of the insurance crimes, and the group of crimes broadly classified as 'graft.' I do not know enough of the facts in the packing house scandals to include them in this generalization, but generally speaking this class of evils is due to a lack of conscience as applied to corporate acts.

"A man will excuse much in his corporation which his conscience would condemn in himself.

"Corporate conscience is negative. It minimizes responsibility and multiplies and magnifies excuses.

"A rudimentary moral sense will keep a man from stealing his neighbor's goods, but the moral sense must be educated to see moral wrong—sin and crime—in the unconscionable acts of a corporation.

Public Conscience Roused

"There has been of late a great awakening of what is called the public conscience. This has given rise to much broad, liberal discussion of prevalent abuses and their causes, fixing the responsibility and often disclosing criminality and is doing much to remedy those abuses and bring business morality back to the point of safety. This is, at least, my hope. I believe I can see a decided tendency in that direction.

"Public discussion brings understanding, and men who have been blind to the wrongs of corporate crimes have had their eyes opened. They now see much that they could not see before.

"This is business morality. Social morality depends upon something more. The family, which is the foundation of society, is the source to which we must look for its purification. The great crimes and scandals which are now exciting so much comment can be traced directly to a lack of sanctity in the family relations. Until the sanctity of family ties is more generally recognized, I see little hope for improvement.

Foundation Must Be Made Sure

"The principal obligation of the family is the religious education of the young, the importance of which is apparent. With it everything may be accomplished. Without it, we may have great awakenings, we may have a general revival of public conscience, but relapses will come again because the foundation is lacking.

"Most of the putridity of private character, as disclosed in the revelations of courts and the press, grows out of family relations with false standards and without religion and not from a lack of family relations.

"Returning to the civic side of the question it may be asked why, if I see such close relations between the morality of business and religious training in the family, I did not join the policyholders' committee in its efforts to do away with the scandalous conditions that prevail in these companies?

"I was reluctant to decline the place offered me on that committee, but I believe that the questions involved are very intimately associated with great and vital matters of finance. With such I am not sufficiently familiar to enable me to judge fairly should doubt arise, and I felt that my best course was to decline, which I have done. My resignation has been received by the committee and reluctantly accepted.

"The whole matter is in good hands now, and I trust and believe will be worked out wisely."

GERMAN'S FIGHT CANNED MEATS

BERLIN, July 21.—A serious movement, directed against American meat and lard, is being pushed by agrarian interests, with the likelihood of commanding powerful support in the Reichstag when the matter come up in the Autumn. It was started by so-called agricultural chambers, composed of landlords and farmers, and resulted in the Prussian Diet in June adopting a resolution recommending that the government pass a law excluding absolutely all preserved meat unaccompanied by the glands and all other parts of the carcass.

It was proposed that lard be altogether excluded. It was obvious to the chambers that the importation with preserved meat of other parts of the bodies was impossible or impracticable. The destruction of the American meat and lard trade was the object in view.

Similar or identical resolutions were passed by the agricultural chambers of Bavaria, Saxony, Wurtemburg and other German States.

CAR CRASH, ICE CREAM FLOOD

Twelve and one-half gallons of ice cream disappeared like Summer vacation money into the capacious holds of a band of small boys last night at Forest Hills, when an ice cream wagon was run down by an electric car on Washington street. How many boys there were is not known, and who they were is probably only known through the payment of $2 per call to doctors, or by "ain't hungry" excuses this morning. At any rate, the boys got rid of the cream in record time, using only their hands for spoons, and doing it all while the police were looking after two injured men.

Eli Stevens of Cambridge, who was driving the team, was injured about the legs, and Henry Kenney of Jamaica Plain, who was with him, was injured about the legs, hips and arms.

So Jurgis went to the stockyards again and was introduced to the political lord of the district, the boss of Chicago's Mayor. It was Scully who owned the brickyards and the dump and the ice pond—though Jurgis did not know it.

It was Scully who was to blame for the unpaved street in which Jurgis's child had been drowned; it was Scully who had put into office the magistrate who had first sent Jurgis to jail; it was Scully who was principal stockholder in the company which had sold him the ramshackle tenement and then robbed him of it.

But Jurgis knew none of these things—any more than he knew that Scully was but a tool and puppet of the packers. To him Scully was a mighty power, the "biggest" man he had ever met.

He was a little, dried-up Irishman, whose hands shook. He had a brief talk with his visitor, watching him with his rat-like eyes, and making up his mind about him; and then he gave him a note to Mr. Harmon, one of the head managers of Durham's:

"The bearer, Jurgis Rudkus, is a particular friend of mine, and I would like you to find him a good place, for important reasons. He was once indiscreet, but you will perhaps be so good as to overlook that."

Mr. Harmon looked up inquiringly when he read this. "What does he mean by 'indiscreet'?" he asked.

"I was blacklisted, sir," said Jurgis.

At which the other frowned. "Blacklisted?" he said. "How do you mean?"

And Jurgis turned red with embarrassment. He had forgotten that a blacklist did not exist. "I—that is—I had difficulty in getting a place," he stammered.

"I got into a quarrel with a foreman—not my own boss, sir—and struck him."

"I see," said the other, and meditated for a few moments. "What do you wish to do?" he asked.

"Anything, sir," said Jurgis—"only I had a broken arm this Winter, and so I have to be careful."

"How would it suit you to be a night watchman?"

"That wouldn't do, sir. I have to be among the men at night."

"I see—politics. Well, would it suit you to trim hogs?"

"Yes, sir," said Jurgis.

And Mr. Harmon called a time-keeper and said, "Take this man to Pat Murphy and tell him to find room for him somehow."

And so Jurgis marched into the hog-killing room, a place where, in the years gone by, he had come begging for a job. Now he walked jauntily, and smiled to himself, seeing the frown that came to the boss's face as the time-keeper said, "Mr. Harmon says to put this man on." It would overcrowd his department and spoil the record he was trying to make—but he said not a word except "All right."

Again a Workingman

And so Jurgis became a workingman once more; and straightaway he sought out his old friends, and joined the union, and began to "root" for "Scotty" Doyle.

Doyle had done him a good turn once, he explained, and was really a bully chap; Doyle was a workingman himself, and would represent the workingman—why did they want to vote for a millionaire "sheeny," and what the hell had Mike Scully ever done for them that they should back his candidates all the time?

And meantime Scully had given Jurgis a note to the Republican leader of the ward, and he had gone there and met the crowd he was to work with.

Already they had hired a big hall, with some of the brewer's money, and every night Jurgis brought in a dozen new members of the "Doyle Republican Association."

Pretty soon they had a grand opening night; and there was a brass band, which marched through the streets, and fireworks and bombs and red lights in front of the hall; and there was an enormous crowd, with two overflow meetings—so that the pale and trembling candidate had to recite three times over the little speech which one of Scully's henchmen had written, and which he had been a month learning by heart.

Best of all, the famous and eloquent Senator Spareshanks, presidential candidate, rode out in an automobile to discuss the sacred privileges of American citizenship, and protection and prosperity for the American workingman. His inspiriting address was quoted to the extent of half a column in all the morning newspapers, which also said that it could be stated upon excellent authority that the unexpected popularity developed by Doyle, the Republican candidate for Alderman, was giving great anxiety to Mr. Scully, the chairman of the Democratic City Committee.

Becomes a Heeler

During this parade, and at innumerable cart-tail meetings as well, Jurgis labored tirelessly. He did not make any speeches—there were lawyers and other experts for that—but he helped to manage things; distributing notices and posting placards and bringing out the crowds; and when the show was on he attended to the fireworks and the beer.

Thus in the course of the campaign he handled many hundreds of dollars of the Hebrew brewer's money, administering it with naive and touching fidelity. Toward the end, however, he learned that he was regarded with hatred by the rest of the "boys," because he compelled them either to make a poorer showing than he or to do without their share of the pie.

After that Jurgis did his best to please them, and to make up for the time he had lost before he discovered the extra bung-holes of the campaign barrel.

It pleased Mike Scully, also. On election morning he was out at 4 o'clock, "getting out the vote"; he had a two-horse carriage to ride in, and he went from house to house for his friends and escorted them in triumph to the polls.

He voted half a dozen times himself and voted some of his friends as often; he brought bunch after bunch of the newest foreigners—Lithuanians, Poles, Bohemians, Slovaks—and when he had put them through the mill he turned them over to another man to take to the next polling place.

When Jurgis first set out the captain of the precinct gave him a hundred dollars, and three times in the course of the day he came for another hundred, and not more than twenty-five out of each lot got stuck in his own pocket.

The balance all went for actual votes, and on a day of Democratic landslides they elected "Scotty" Doyle, the ex-tenpin setter, by nearly a thousand plurality—and beginning at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and ending at 3 the next morning, Jurgis treated himself to a most unholy and horrible "jag."

CHAPTER XXVI.

AFTER the elections Jurgis stayed on in Packingtown and kept his job. The agitation to break up the police protection of criminals was continuing, and it seemed to him best to "lay low" for the present.

He had nearly three hundred dollars in the bank, and might have considered himself entitled to a vacation; but he had an easy job, and force of habit kept him at it. Besides Mike Scully, whom he consulted, advised him that something might "turn up" before long.

Jurgis got himself a place in a boarding house with some congenial friends. He had already inquired of Aniele, and learned that Elzbieta and her family had gone down town, and so he gave no further thought to them. He went with a new set, now, young unmarried fellows who were "sporty."

Strike is On

Before long Jurgis discovered what Scully had meant by something "turning up." In May the agreement between the packers and the unions expired, and a new agreement had to be signed. Negotiations were going on, and the yards were full of talk of a strike.

The old scale had dealt with the wages of the skilled men only, and of the members of the Meat Workers' Union about two-thirds were unskilled men. In Chicago these latter were receiving for the most part eighteen and a half cents an hour, and the unions wished to make this the general wage for the next year.

It was not nearly so large a wage as it seemed. In the course of the negotiations the union officers examined time-checks to the amount of ten thousand dollars, and they found that the highest wages paid had been fourteen dollars a week, the lowest two dollars and five cents, and the average of the whole six dollars and sixty-five cents.

And six dollars and sixty-five cents was hardly too much for a man to keep a family on. Considering the fact that the price of dressed meat had increased nearly 50 per cent. in the last five years, when the price of "beef on the hoof" had decreased as much, it would have seemed that the packers ought to be able to pay it; but the packers were unwilling to pay it—they rejected the union demand, and to show what their purpose was, a week or two after the agreement expired they put down the wages of about a thousand men to sixteen and a half cents, and it was said that old man Jones had vowed he would put them to fifteen before he got through.

There were a million and a half men in the country looking for work, a hundred thousand of them right in Chicago; and were the packers to let the union stewards march into their places and bind them to a contract that would lose them several thousand dollars a day for a year? Not much!

GENERAL RICE DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME

WAKEFIELD, July 21.—Brigadier General Edmund Rice, U. S. A., (retired), died suddenly last evening of heart failure on the piazza of his home on Myrtle avenue. He had been suffering from a weak heart since his return from the Philippines where he was ill with a fever.

At 6:30 last evening he went upstairs to dress for dinner, but he told his wife that he had a slight attack of indigestion and thought he had best not eat anything. She went down stairs to get him a glass of milk and he followed her and went out on the piazza.

Mrs. Rice noticed that the General walked rather unsteadily and she went to the door just in time to see him fall into a swingchair on the piazza. She rushed to his assistance, but when she reached him he was unconscious.

Dr. G. L. Kilgore, Dr. J. H. Kimball and Dr. M. S. Raynes were summoned, but General Rice was dead when they arrived.

General Rice, was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1842. At the age of fourteen he entered Norwich Military Academy in Vermont.

He entered the army as a captain of the Nineteenth Massachusetts Infantry in August, 1861, became a major in 1862 and a lieutenant-colonel in 1864. His Civil War record and his military service were of the most brilliant description. His regiment was called the best in the Army of the Potomac. In the Spanish War he secured fresh laurels in his work of reorganizing the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment. He was retired on August 13, 1903.

LABOR NEWS

Work of organizing among the painters is one of the greatest features of the activity among union men at this time. To-night at Painters' Hall, No. 467 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington painters will form one more union. During the week locals have been organized at Winchester, Malden and Wakefield by International Organizer William F. McCarthy.

The Winchester body includes the men of Woburn and has been officially chartered as Union 415. Monday night it will conduct a smoke talk and installation meeting at Waterfield Hall.

The Wakefield organization, which includes Stoneham and Reading in its jurisdiction, was formally organized last night at Albion Hall.

The Carpenters' Unions of the Brockton-Rockland district have materially assisted Mr. McCarthy in that vicinity. At a mass meeting last Thursday night they voted not to work with non-union painters in the district. Union conditions were secured at a number of shops, also a wage increase of twenty-five cents a day.

CHAPMAN AS CANDIDATE.

David A. Chapman of Engineers' Union No. 16 is being urged to become a candidate for schoolhouse custodian. His own union has put forward his name, and as he received the highest percentage in the recent competitive examination and also as he is a practical engineer and has had charge of boilers, the union men are confident that he has a good chance of receiving the appointment.

TO URGE UNION LABEL.

The general use of the union label is being urged by the executive and new organizing committees of Horseshoers' Union No. 5. It is proposed to influence all employers of union blacksmiths to use the union stamp. For that purpose, and also for the general organizing work, Daniel Mannix was chosen to have charge and directions in the Roxbury and Brookline districts, Peter O'Rourke in South Boston, President Roche and D. D. Driscoll in the South End, Joseph Boyle in Charlestown and the North and West ends, Edward Day in the Back Bay and John Madden in Cambridge and Somerville.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Gasfitters, Fixture Fitters and Hangers' Union No. 175 have elected Louis Shannahoffski president, Michael J. Brown vice-president, George W. Mooney recording secretary, Benjamin F. Andrews financial secretary, John Richards treasurer, Ed Kruden inside guard, John F. Clancy, William J. Grindley and M. J. Brown delegates to the State convention of plumbers, gas and steam fitters at Fitchburg, John F. Clancy and B. F. Andrews delegates to the meeting to form the building trades section of the C. L. U.

TO SELECT ORGANIZER.

To devise a plan for electing and maintaining a special official, who shall organize the craft in every section of the country a special convention of the unions of drop forgers and hammermen and the die sinkers is to be held at Brookline in August.

TOLD OF SUCCESSES.

James F. Spears, grand vice president of the Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders, was a speaker at the meeting of Boston Lodge No. 250 last night. He told of the success being achieved in every section of the country and the conditions of trade at various points. He said that those members who had formed a dual international had recently tried to establish a local at Providence and failed. Eleven new members were admitted last night by Lodge 50.

LABOR NOTES.

Roxbury association 14, N. A. S. E., will resume its educational meetings in October. Last night three new members were admitted.

The new carworkers' union 55 doubled its membership last night, the officers reported.

TOOK OATH ON CRUCIFIX

Swearing on a crucifix to meet a robber at the Touraine yesterday and give up $50 to reclaim a gold watch, Dr. Luther O. Whitman of No. 118 Mt. Vernon street, kept his word, and strange to say, so did the robber. Special Officer Harry F. Burns was also there and placed under arrest Frank Fisher, the man accused of this novel robbery.

On Thursday evening Dr. Whitman says he was seated in his office alone reading, with the windows partially open and the curtains up. He declares that when he admitted Fisher, who said he had come for treatment, that Fisher took what little money he had, and after taking his gold watch made an agreement to meet him yesterday.

TRAIN KILLS LYNN WOMAN.

LYNN, July 21.—Mrs. Joseph H. Corcoran, sixty-five years old, was struck and instantly killed yesterday at the Chatham crossing by a Boston bound Portland express on the Boston & Maine railroad. She attempted to cross the tracks after the gate had been lowered.

"Black Bart" Holshay Cured of Criminal Tendencies by the Knife.

Enough of Skull Cut Away to Give the Brain a Chance to Expand.

MENOMINEE, Mich., July 20.—"Black Bart" Holshay has been cured of his criminal tendencies by a surgical operation.

Until the sheriff captured him red handed and the court sent him to prison for life "Black Bart" was a bloodthirsty bandit, whose criminal performances held the northern part of Michigan in terror.

Dr. C. E. Hart of the Ionia hospital performed the operation that transformed this all-around bad man into a model of propriety.

To a certain degree it was an operation rather in the interests of science than those of the patient. "Black Bart" fully appreciated the situation. He knew it was a toss-up between life and death. But he also knew that if the operation turned out to be successful there would be a good chance of his getting a pardon. And so he took a chance, and already there is a movement on foot to bring about his release.

Dr. Hart, who makes a specialty of cranial surgery, became convinced that there was something wrong with Holshay's brain and that under existing conditions the man could not help being a criminal. By special arrangement with the prison authorities he had the life prisoner transferred from jail to the Ionia hospital, where, with scalpels and a circular saw driven by electricity he performed the operation.

Gave Brain a Chance.

In simple language, he cut away enough of Holshay's skull to give the brain a chance to expand naturally. From what doctors call the "median" bone he sawed off two pieces. That was the operation.

"Black Bart's" abnormally compressed brain then began to expand naturally, and the loss of the protective bony covering was more than compensated for by the restoration of normal activity of the cells which had been retarded in development.

There have been hundreds of thousands of excisions of bone from the skull to relieve abnormal pressure upon the brain and so restore the motor centres to normal activity, but aside from "Black Bart's" case there is only one other recorded in the annals of surgery where the skull was cut away in such a manner as to affect the sensory centres controlling mental impulses. That was the case of Harold Hurley, who was operated on in St. Vincent's Hospital, Toledo, O., last February. The operation changed Hurley from a bad boy into a good boy, and altered his mental equipment so radically that he became almost another being.

Opens Up New Field.

Eminent brain specialists say that conditions under which "Black Bart" and the Hurley boy suffered are usually associated with idiocy, but they use the term "idiocy" in its broadest sense, meaning an arrested or imperfect development in all the degrees from complete imbecility to the types that have their development in criminal tendencies.

Many attempts have been made to cure imbeciles by the operation of craniectomy, the taking away of portions of the cranium to permit the expansion of the brain. But most cranial surgeons admit that operation to transform imbeciles into reasoning beings have never been thoroughly successful.

Dr. Hart's experiment opens up an entirely new field to criminologists.

BEIT'S ONE ROMANCE A LOVE UNTOLD

Policy of $80,000 in Favor of Chum's Wife Taken When Bennett Was Dying.

COUPLE NEVER KNEW OF IT

London, July 21.—The greatest romance in the life of Alfred Beit, Monarch of diamonds and second richest man in the world is not to be revealed so long as the names of most of the individual beneficiaries will not be disclosed. This was made known yesterday when the greater part of the document was given publicity, showing a wide scattering of millions for charitable, educational and philanthropic purposes.

But one act of generosity possibly overlooked in the closeting of the personal affairs of the millionaire, [illegible] among the treasures in his great house with its army of servants, has given two pictures of the personal side of his life. None has appeared yet to say which is the true one.

The Elizabeth Bennett in whose favor Beit took out an $80,000 policy in the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, as "my intended wife," has been identified, and is believed to be a beneficiary under the will of Beit.

She is a widow, not young, but the junior of Beit by several years, who lives in Mayfair. Her husband was a mining engineer, who was a companion of Beit when the latter was prospecting in South Africa, and they were partners.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS FROM ESCAPING GAS

Charles Reidell, forty-two, was found unconscious in his room at No. 1,275 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, this forenoon, from the effects of illuminating gas escaping from an open jet. He was rushed to the City Hospital, after Dr. F. F. Murphy had given him temporary aid, and his condition is serious.

WILL AL KAUFMANN FURNISH A SURPRISE AS DID SAM BERGER?---BY CARTOONIST TAD.

O'BRIEN OPENED ONE, NOW WHO WILL OPEN THE OTHER?

JEFF WON'T RE-ENTER RING TO MEET BERGER

Special to the Boston American.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 21.—When Jim Jeffries, the world's heavyweight champion, was asked whether he would fight Sam Berger, who bested Jack O'Brien Monday night, he declared: "No, nor any other heavyweight."

Jeffries was seen in reference to a possible battle with Berger, and he declared if Berger had whipped all the Jack O'Briens in the world he could not be induced to return to the ring. He declared he was positively out of the fighting game forever. He was fully satisfied with his rustic, or, as he terms it, the simple, life, and has made enough money out of pugilism to keep him in comfort for the rest of his days.

Jeff, it is said, would prefer to sacrifice one-quarter of his fortune rather than enter upon a long training siege at this time. He has taken on flesh rapidly in the last year and tips the beam close to 250 pounds.

Jimmy Coffroth, the fight promoter, has recently made many trips to Jeffries's farm at Los Angeles in the hope of urging the champion to enter the ring again, but, as in the past, his efforts have been futile.

"There's no use talking," said Coffroth to-day, "Jeff is out of the game for good. He will not give a proposition to return to the squared circle any consideration whatever. I think it's by his wife's wish that he has given up fighting forever, and Jeff is playing the part of the obedient husband. I don't think Jeff will ever be himself again, for he has grown too fat to box and too lazy to train."

A TALK ON BILLIARDS BY 'STUDENT' SLOSSON

"Form in billiards," says George Slosson, "is as variable as the wind. Form is the basis of confidence. Form is having everything you should have and knowing that you have it. When your touch, execution and position insight are working at their best and in unison—that's form. One may naturally possess two qualities and acquire a third, but the third being an acquired accomplishment, is unreliable. When it fails to work properly it not only mars a player's game, but provokes him at length into playing a worse game, unless he be one of great self-control and iron nerve."

The truth of these observations no one knows better than Slosson, for there is no expert living whose playing is more affected by the mental condition in which he finds himself than that of the man who has won and lost championships more than once.

Possibly Schaefer at his best never possessed greater information regarding angles and cushion shots than Slosson, but there have been times when "the Wizard" could make the shots and Slosson could not. The nerve wires in "the student's" physical layout would become crossed, and he would miss chances at which he would ordinarily laugh.

And missing such chances never added to Slosson's peace of mind, for he is temporarily incapable of sustaining a nerve-racking game if he is the least off in "form." The player who has not an intuitive knowledge of cushions and angles can never hope to become a real topnotcher in the billiard world. Constant practice will overcome many defects, but it will not make the perfect player, unless he was "born to the cue," as it were.

AMBY M'GARRY AND WILLIE HOSEY TO CLASH

WILL FIGHT IN PRIVATE

NEW YORK, July 21.—Sometime within the next seventy-two hours Amby McGarry and Willie Hosey will clash for a finish fight.

Those in charge of the affair maintain absolute secrecy as to the location of the battle-ground, although it will not be in the State of New York, they say, and no New York law will be violated. However, there are other States in this vicinity, and a sharp lookout will be maintained for Reuben constables.

McGarry has been training for the bout for the past three weeks, under the eye of his brother Mike and Paddy Walsh. The men are to meet at 136 pounds six hours before the bout. They will face each other on the grass, which looks to be a big advantage for McGarry, as Amby is admittedly slower on his feet than Hosey.

The men were to fight fifteen rounds, according to the original articles, but the McGarry party, figuring that Amby's strength would stand him in good stead in a battle of longer duration, suggested a finish affair. The Hosey people agreed, depending on Willie's superior ring generalship and longer experience to pull him out.

Side bets of $1,000 have been posted by both parties, and the winner will get the entire gate receipts. The attendance is limited to 100, and it will take a ten-dollar note to witness the fight.

Auto Horn Should Be Used the Right Way

In England, as here, there have been much complaint and protest against the use of the horn. It has been asserted by some of the objectors that the abolition of the horn would mean the abolition of reckless driving, because, being unable to warn people out of the way, motorists would have to go slowly, and then fewer accidents would result. A writer in the Autocar of London tells how he put this theory to the test, as follows: "Mind you, I have never believed in using the horn unnecessarily, or what might be called irritatingly; my experience consisted in pretending I was driving a horse carriage. The first time I tried it was in a small town. I went exactly the same pace as a dogcart which was about fifty yards in front of me, or, I should say, I tried to go at the same pace, and while I was doing this I got my companion to watch carefully what the dogcart was doing; whether it had to pull up suddenly or to make any violent swerves. Now, although I was going at a very modest speed, indeed, I found that the majority of the people in the streets seemed absolutely unconscious of the presence of the car. I had to pull up three times in a quarter of a mile, and to yaw suddenly twice. I was too busily occupied to look after the dogcart, but my friend told me it pursued the even tenor of its way uninterrupted. The clank-clank of the horse and the noise of the metal tires was sufficient to warn every one of its presence, but my car without the use of the horn was unquestionably dangerous, and I would not repeat the experiment again. The place in which I tried it was a fair specimen of a small provincial town.

"Next I thought I would try and see how I could get on in the country without using the horn, to which some people appear to have such great objection. The result was really laughable. I overtook a cart laden with bricks in the middle of the road, going, I suppose, at about three miles an hour, and making, as all such carts do, a considerable amount of noise. I waited patiently behind for over five minutes, just jogging along at the same speed, and as close up as I could go conveniently without getting too near. To my relief came a cart in the opposite direction. The man drew over, and directly the cart had passed him I went by, and he nearly fell off his seat in surprise. However, I pursued my way, determined to experiment a little further, and overtook and passed a rubber tired trap without trouble. Then I came to an iron tired brougham. This was nearly in the middle of the road, but it edged over to the left, and I concluded that the driver heard me, so began to pass very cautiously. When he caught sight of my dumb irons out of the tail of his right eye he nearly pulled his horse into the ditch, and I heard a scream from the interior of the vehicle. However, I assured myself that no harm had been done and that I would have one more try to do without the horn. Presently I came up to a high cart driven by a huge person with a vermilion neck. I feel sure that this man heard me, but I did not blow my horn as he evidently expected I would do, so he held on to the crown of the road for some time, and I trickled along behind him. Presently he bore a little to the left and I essayed to pass him. The moment I did see he literally exploded; in fact, the language which he used because I had not blown my horn was surprising. Perhaps the anti-horn enthusiasts will kindly note, and also bear in mind the fact that there is moderation in all things. The right thing is not too much horn, but just enough, and if you do not give that now generally accepted warning you will be lucky if you do not get into trouble in more ways than one."

HAMILTON AT HAVERHILL.

HAVERHILL, July 21.—Billy Hamilton, the former Boston National league fielder, came to terms with Manager Sayer of the Haverhill Baseball Club and will join the locals in this city next Monday. There is a possibility that he may play in Worcester to-day.

JOCKEY BELL SUSPENDED.

NEW YORK, July 21.—After his ride on Bobbie Kean in the fourth race at Brighton Beach to-day the stewards suspended Jockey Charles Bell for the meeting and referred his case to the Jockey Club.

AL KAUFMAN DEFIES O'BRIEN AND SAYS

BERGER FEARS HIM TOO

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Al Kaufmann is dying for a chance to fight Jack O'Brien or Sam Berger. O'Brien says he'll fight Kaufmann, whom he once knocked out in eighteen rounds, but Kaufmann says "Missouri."

"Both Berger and O'Brien promised to meet me," says Kaufmann, but I guess they've both got cold feet. Berger is skidooing to the coast without promising to meet me, while O'Brien is going abroad to meet easy marks, because he knows in his heart that I can beat him to a pulp.

"When O'Brien beat me I was a green amateur, but since I've improved a 100 per cent. O'Brien knows this, so he is going to dodge my deli.

"I used to train with Berger and no man on earth knows that I am his master better than this same Sam. I have waited in silence, but now I see my game getting away and I want the public to know the reason of their departure.

"Billy Delaney wired me that I was to meet Burns. Well, before I go West I want to show in this city. Get any man, Fitz, Hart or either of the Berger-O'Brien pair, and I will tackle him."

JAY M'GREGOR, LEXINGTON'S MOST-TALKED-OF YEARLING

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 21.—The most-talked-of yearling at Lexington is Will Evans' colt by Jay McGregor (2:07), dam Baroness Sybil, by Baron Wilkes (2:18). This youngster trots like an old horse, and the last time out stepped a quarter in 34¾ seconds, last eighth in 17¾ seconds. Evans thinks he is the greatest yearling he ever saw.

Between August 1 and 15 Todd (2:14¾) will be shipped to Boston. He will make the season of 1907 at the Johnson Farm.

The two-year-olds are attracting the most attention at the track just now, and it can be said in passing that there are some extra smart ones here. Those daily visitors to the track who like to keep tab on the doings of the horses are quite partial to some of these youngsters and at times are prone to extravagance in sounding the praises of some particular favorite.

The bay colt Wilkerson in W. W. Evans's stable, is much talked about. Wilkerson is not only a well bred colt, but is a handy one. His sire is Todd (2:14¾), a young stallion, who has already distinguished himself as sire of early and extreme speed, while his dam is Nannine, by Ashland Wilkes (2:17¼)—a strong combination both as to blood lines and speed inheritance. The best this colt has been asked to do was a mile in 2:24¼, half in 1:11¼, quarter in 35 seconds.

Charles Marvin's McCutcheon is a colt of impressive conformation, and is well enough bred to go at the head of the best stud in the world, being by Mendocino, from Palla (2:16), by Palo Alto (2:08¾). It is mere play for him to beat 2:30.

General Watts and Lucille Marlow step impressively in their work. They are in H. M. Childs's stable and are owned by Senator Bailey of Texas. They can do the mile cleverly in 2:30, the half in 1:12 and the quarter in 35 seconds. Lucille Marlow is a sister to Budd Bonner (2) (2:19¼), while General Watts is by Axworthy (2:15½), dam Carpet (2:28), by Prodigal (2:16). The filly's dam is Miss Edgar, by Bourbon Wilkes, and, by the way, Lightsome (2) (2:14½), winner of the Kentucky Futurity last year, is out of a Bourbon Wilkes mare. The breeding of both Lucille Marlow and Lightsome appeals strongly to Senator Bailey, particularly the Mambrino part of it. Constantine, the sire of Lightsome, is inbred to Mambrino Patchen blood, while Prodigal, the sire of Lucille Marlow, is well endowed with the same strain.

All visitors to the track are impressed with Senator Axworthy, a colt by Axworthy (2:15½), dam Improbable, by Prodigal (2:16). This colt is in W. A. Owings's stable and is from a speed-producing family. While he has not been asked to step a mile as fast as some of the others of his age, he is one of the best-gaited colts at the track. He can do a half comfortably in 1:14 and the quarter in 35 seconds.

The Bondsman is represented at the track by three very clever two-year-old colts, The Exile, out of Moonstone (2:28), by Sultan (2:24), in J. H. Thayer's stable; Ali Baba, out of Reply, by Princeton, in H. M. Jones's stable, and The Spectator, out of Bessie Egbert, by Actuary D. (2:20), in W. F. Freeman's stable. These colts have beaten 2:30 in their work, with an occasional half in 1:12½, and quarter in 35 seconds.

Ed Allen has two, a colt and a filly, in his stable, and they are not only pleasingly gaited but show a high rate of speed in spots. The colt is Lord Vinko, by Moko, dam Vincera, by Wilkes Boy (2:24¼), while the filly is Oraosa, by The Tramp, dam Milliner, by Constantine (2:12½).

Rowland Drake is pointing a very smart filly, by Baron Wilkes, Jr. (2:23¼), dam Lady Belle, by King of Belair. They call her Lady Admiral and she is owned by Kinzea Stone of Georgetown. It is not a severe undertaking for her to step to the half in 1:12, quarter in 35 seconds.

All the two-year-olds named above are well entered in the futurities.

MANY SALUTES FOR $125,000 HORSE

NEW YORK, July 21.—August Belmont's newly-purchased stallion Rocksand, winner of the St. Leger Stakes and the Derby in 1903, the horse for which his owner is said to have paid 25,000 guineas, arrived here from England on the Atlantic transport liner Minneapolis. Mr. Belmont himself was on hand to meet the horse, which was placed in Mr. Belmont's private palace stock car on a float in the same slip and sent at once to the Nursery Stud in Kentucky.

With Rocksand came the mare Topiary and her foal by Lavingo. The animals occupied padded stalls and on the way over were attended by four grooms, who slept in rooms adjoining the stalls of the horses. The Minneapolis had good weather all the way and the horses were very fit when they landed. There was a big crowd of photographers on the pier to take snapshots at Rocksand, and he was greeted with the regulation sixty salutes due his grade.

It took just exactly two hours to get Rocksand ashore after the ship had docked, and it would have taken longer had not Roundsman John O'Keefe of the mounted squad volunteered his services and placed the animal under arrest. Topiary came down the gangplank in fine style, but when Harry Clark, head animal master of the ship, tried to lead Rocksand the latter balked. Clark got a handful of clover hay and held it in front of Rocksand's nose, who merely sniffed it.

The stevedores were trying to open the ship's hatches so they could begin to break out the cargo, and the noise of the donkey engine made Rocksand nervous. The mounted cop dismounted, ran up the gangway and patted the stallion on the nose.

"I think he will come now," said the cop, and sure enough he did, while the crowd on the pier and aboard the ship cheered.

Mr. Belmont tried to show his appreciation of the cop's act, and while he did so held in his hand something yellow that made the loungers stare, but the cop simply smiled and got on his horse without even shaking hands with the owner of Rocksand.

The stallion was led to West street on his way to the car, and half way between the piers was stopped for the benefit of the camera brigade.

MORAN RACES TONIGHT AT REVERE.

Another close race is predicted tonight at the Revere bike track when Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea milkman, races against Will Stinson of Cambridge and John Beddell of New York. Moran allows the other pair two laps start and the handicap may mean defeat for him.

Hugh MacLean was unable to overcome the same lead he gave Collins and Menus Beddell, and Moran will have a lot of trouble in beating out such seasoned riders as Stinson and Bedell. John Bedell has not been seen behind pace but his ability as a sprinter is well known.

Stinson has shown the best form ever this season and is simply flying behind the motors while Moran was never seen going so well. For a three cornered contest it should develop into a real battle.

There will also be two sprint races on the card for the professionals and some clever riding is on tap in each.

In the five-mile open with prizes on every mile post the flower of the "Pro" game will be on the mark, including the boy wonder, Young Coffey, who beat Jimmy Moran last Saturday night, Pat Logan, Menus Bedell, McDonald, Holbrook, McKinnon and a lot of other new ones.

The same bunch will appear in the mile handicap with the field down to low marks which will make the going faster.

MOWATT STOPPED IN SIXTH BY HYLAND

DENVER, Col., July 21.—Six rounds, brimful of fighting, were enough for Tommy Mowatt, the fighting conductor of Chicago, and while he was staggering helplessly around the ring, vainly trying to ward off the wallops of Dick Hyland of San Francisco, his seconds threw up the sponge.

Mowatt took up more fares than he could register. He was pitted against one of the best lads in the business, and was handicapped in age, cleverness and ring generalship. A more game battle has never been seen in Denver. Hopelessly defeated after the third round, the Chicago man never faltered a moment, but was always coming in and willing to take a couple in order to land a haymaker, which was his only chance of claiming the big end of the purse.

Hyland fought a cool, clever battle throughout. He warmed up gradually, and never missed his opportunity. Cleverly avoiding the wild swings, jabs and uppercuts of his apparently mad antagonist, he countered with rare ability, and at all times had the advantage.

The fight was held in a tent across the border of Denver County, and more than 3,000 enthusiasts took the long tramp across country to witness the battle.

Fight by Rounds.

Mowatt Struck First Blow

FIRST ROUND—The bell rang at 11:07 and the men shook hands. They separated quickly and the milling began at once. Mowatt got in the first blow, a right swing to the head. Hyland came back with a right to the wind and repeated the blow a second later. Mowatt did considerable dancing about, with Hyland following him doggedly. Mowatt landed a left on the face. Hyland countered with a left jab to the jaw. Hyland shot another right to the wind and a left to the face. Mowatt landed a stiff right in the wind and a moment later got away with a right and left swing to the head that got him first blood. Hyland was fighting easy when the gong rang and the round was even up.

Hyland on the Aggressive

SECOND ROUND—Hyland was on the aggressive, but both [illegible] freely. Mowatt sent his right to the ribs. Hyland returned the compliment with a right on the jaw. They clinched and Hyland landed a short jab on the wind. Mowatt scored a left to the ribs. Hyland also delivered a left punch to the ribs and followed it with a right to the fee. Mowatt was bleeding, but swinging fiercely and landed a right in the face and another on the ribs. In the skirmish both men tripped and fell and the gong rang as they were getting up. Hyland had slightly the better of the round and kept hammering Mowatt's kidneys with telling effect.

Mowatt Sent Right to Ribs

THIRD ROUND—Mowatt sent a right to the ribs and they clinched. Hyland sent a hard left to the head in the break and backed it up with a heavy right to the chest. He was fighting very aggressively. Mowatt sent a right to the ribs and Dick gave him a receipt for it with a left to the head. Hyland then landed a right on the head and they clinched, with Tommy uppercutting savagely. A swift exchange of rights, followed by Hyland with a hard left to the wind, and Mowatt was rushed to the ropes, falling through them as the round ended. It was Hyland's round.

Mowatt Landed On Nose.

FOURTH ROUND—Mowatt landed a beauty on Hyland's nose and followed with two quick lefts to the wind. Hyland pushed a stiff left to the face. Mowatt sent a right to the wind, and in the mill which followed in Hyland's corner Mowatt put his hands below his belt and groaned as if fouled. It looked like a stall, and the crowd hissed. Geary decided no foul, and Mowatt fought harder for the next thirty seconds than at any other time in the fight.

Hyland Off His Feet.

FIFTH ROUND—The beginning of the end. The California boy shot a hefty right to the face and a lefthander to the jaw. Again he sent both hands hard against Mowatt's head, and the Chicago boy got back with a punch of his left that shoved Hyland off his feet. He was up in a second, and went after Mowatt's wind like a demon, sending a left and right repeatedly with all his weight back of them. Mowatt got in a good right to the ribs, but Hyland came right ahead with a jolt on the jaw and landed a pile-driver on the ribs that put Mowatt in distress. The gong rang with both men blowing heavily. This round was all Tyland's.

Threw Up Sponge.

SIXTH ROUND—At the getaway Mowatt landed a right on Hyland's eye, but the little fellow was right after him and the round was still young when he got him going with heavy blows, landing on the conductor's kidneys like a sledge hammer time and time again with his right, and at the same time uppercutting him fiercely with his left. Mowatt was hanging over evidently in distress, and his seconds threw a towel into the ring to prevent a knockout. Geary gave Hyland the decision.

CUBS' STRATEGY BOARD.

Chance, Kling, Brown and Tinker are known as the strategy board of the Chicago Cubs. When things look bad they hold sessions in the middle of the diamond, and there generally something happens after one of these meetings, for instance, the defeat of the opposing team.

AUTOISTS SHOULD ALWAYS CARRY RUBBERHOSE

Automobilists will find it a good idea to carry with them a moderate sized length of small rubber hose for an emergency which may arise at any time owing to a sudden rupture of the gasoline feed pipe running from the supply tank to the carbureter. A common cause of leakage is due to the gasoline pipe becoming unsoldered from the cone-shaped pocket at the bottom of the tank, and when this occurs the average automobilist is liable to be towed to the nearest repair shop unless he has a soldering outfit with him and can use it to advantage after the tank has become emptied. Even then, if he has no extra gasoline with him he will be up against it.

If you carry with you the small hose mentioned above, with one end of it fitted to a short length of small pipe, together with a gallon or two-gallon can of extra gasoline, you can manage to keep the car running, provided the spout to your extra can of gasoline is fitted with a cork stopper. The loose end of the rubber hose can be stretched over the fractured end of the gasoline pipe, the other end of the hose to which the short length of extra pipe is attached can be pushed through an improvised hole made in the cork stopper of the can of extra fuel, and by propping up or holding the can you are able to supply your motor with gasoline, and reach home or a place where repairs can be made.

LOWELL CHANGES HANDS.

LOWELL, July 21.—The Lowell franchise in the New England League was purchased late yesterday by Second Baseman Alexander Winn. The new owner reported that Witherup of the Boston Nationals had been signed, also an American League pitcher, and Burns, an infielder of Indianapolis.

ST. LOUIS NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, July 21.—Before going back to Columbus avenue Tenney's tail enders from Boston stopped off her for the first game of four with the Cardinals.

The Tenney bunch had a nice layoff yesterday on account of rain in Cincinnati, and this is just what they needed. The squad that Tenney is carrying is a very small one and inclined to be overworked.

Lindaman was carded to do the pitching for the Tenney crowd, as he is generally very successful against the local team.

A good sized crowd attended the game.

NEWS AND SOCIETY GOSSIP AT RACES

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

One can readily perceive how the running tracks in New Orleans and California keep going all of the Winter with a big attendance. At Salem, as the meeting progresses, the larger have been the crowds. However, to-day is the last chance.

The first accident of the whole meet happened in the last race of yesterday. When little McIntire was seen to hit the fence, and lay on the track motionless, everybody's heart was in their throat. When the wagon brought him down the stretch sitting between two men a general sigh of relief was distinctly heard in the grandstand. His fractured collar bone will keep him out of the saddle for some time, but he should be ready for Saratoga.

New Hampshire's Legislature was well represented. One who knows said that no less than forty were present to see the fun. Included among the spectators were a couple of clergymen from Dover. They appeared particularly interested in the racing. Noticed, too, was Judge Charles Ward, of the probate court of Dover.

The more that come and see for themselves the better is the outlook for racing in New England.

This is "Ladies' Day," and the final opportunity to see racing at Rockingham Park this year. With a half holiday in most of the nearby cities the crowd should be a record breaker. The Exeter handicap is to be decided, besides six other corking good races. It will keep all busy till the last bugle call is sounded.

An interesting New Hampshireite at yesterday's races was Colonel Everett O. Foss of Dover, N. H., aged seventy-six. It was the first running races that Colonel Foss has seen in fifty years.

"I've followed the trotters some during those fifty years," he said, "but not since I went over the road from Dover to Saratoga, fifty years ago, have I seen the runners. This is great. New Hampshire will appreciate it yet, too."

Colonel Foss was a militia colonel before the war. He was an eye witness to the shooting of President Garfield, July 2, 1881, and before that to the assassination of President Lincoln, April 14, 1865. He was an important witness at the Garfield trial against Charles J. Guiteau, the assassin.

With the close of the meeting the turf reporters either skip to other points of racing, or to the regular routine on their home papers. Tom Lynch heads for Fort Erie, Charley Bergen takes in Saratoga, Walter E. Hapgood, too, intends taking in the opening week of the Saratoga meeting. John Pierson (Jack High), lays to his oars till the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville and Peter Kelley will keep "Bob Dunbar" from sleeping at the post in getting his column up every morning.

A. McL. Earlocker, clerk of the course, was given a dinner Thursday evening in the dining room under the grand stand by the employes of the Salem track. A very unique menu card was printed of the bill of fare. It was noted that the short price was Schlitz beer on ice at 7 to 10. The long shot was Swiss cheese at 100 to 1. Needless to say the favorites won by ten city blocks. All present had the time of their lives.

Among the also ran to Earlocker was noted the following: W. S. Raymond, William Jennings, Jr.; Matt Brynes, Charles J. Renberger, Edward Smith, Edward Cole, Captain F. M. Haws, Frank McCabe, Earnest Hall, Henry Kurtzman, Edward Burns, John C. Reese, Frank M. Stevens, John Hynes, Charles L. Logan, Leon N. Salmon, Lawrence O'Brien and Mars Cassidy.

How the later came to foot the list of starters was a mystery till it was discovered he got tangled in the barrier in getting away from the post. The starter for the evening was W. B. Gilpin. He is reported to have collected enough fines from bad acting jocks to keep an infants' home for a year. He says it was a bad lot to get off, but once the flag fell they all dug for everything in sight.

"Happy" was unhappy last night, as only a single one of "Happy's" tips made good.

The entries for to-day are:

Why Change Speed Gear Is Necessary

Something That Has Puzzled the Novice Autoist Is Here Explained.

To the novice probably the most puzzling thing about a gasolene car is the need of a change speed gear, says the Automobile. He is most likely to make a mental comparison between the automobile and the railroad locomotive, with which he is familiar, and to wonder why one has gears and the other has not. In the locomotive the capacity of the boiler to generate steam (energy) is in excess of the quantity used by the engine, and it follows that the maximum pressure can be maintained irrespective of the speed of the locomotive.

When it is so desired the valves that control the supply of steam from the boiler to the cylinder can be arranged so that the full boiler pressure (available energy) can be exerted on the piston for almost the entire length of the stroke. The turning effort of the crank (torque) will therefore be maximum at the lowest speed of rotation, as when starting up or when climbing a grade.

In the gasolene motor the energy contained in the "mixture" is liberated only upon explosion, so that the greater number of explosions in a given time, say a minute, the greater the power developed by the motor, and vice versa. There is no storehouse of energy to draw upon, as in a locomotive boiler, though there is a certain amount of energy stored up in the mass of the flywheel after it is set in motion by the motor, but not before. This is familiarly useful in overcoming the inertia of a car when starting.

Now, suppose a car to be running on a level stretch, with the engine turning at the maximum number of revolutions and driving "direct," should any increased resistance to motion be encountered such as a hill the engine will slow down, for manifestly there is not any more power available to overcome the increased resistance. As the motor slows down the number of explosions per minute will decrease in proportion, and consequently the available amount of energy will be lessened.

It is easy to imagine an increase of resistance to the extent of stopping the motor altogether—as on a very steep hill. But if, instead of having the motor directly connected to the driving wheels, we interpose change speed gears, so that the motor will be obliged to turn a greater number of revolutions to one revolution of the road wheels, we shall get more explosions per minute; or, say, as many of the decreased speed of the car as we get at the higher speed without the use of gears or direct drive.

We have not increased the available supply of energy at all, however; we are simply doing a greater amount of work and doing it in a longer time than before the change of speed was made, and so absorbing a similar amount of power to that used in doing the lesser amount of work in a shorter time—as when driving on the level. Many drivers refer to speed changing (down) as getting "more power" while in reality they are getting less at the rims of the road "driving" wheels owing to the increased mechanical losses due to the use of the change speed gears or indirect drive.

ENGLISH SCHEME FOR LAYING DUST

The latest compound evolved as a means of aiding in the solution of that pressing problem, dust laying, is of English origin, and is nothing more or less than a mixture of oil and water. The oil and water are carried in what appears to be a watering cart of the usual type, but which is provided with separate receptacles communicating with a third tank into which the ingredients may be introduced in any proportion desired.

The compound consists of two to five parts of oil to ninety-eight to ninety-five parts of water, and the mixture is subjected to the action of a rapidly rotating paddle wheel turning on a shaft in the centre of the tank and driven by a chain from the road wheel of the cart itself. The oil is thus broken up and mixed uniformly in a fine state of subdivision with the water, and this emulsion of oil and water is scattered over the road in a fine spray in the usual manner.

Trials made on several stretches of road used by automobilists are said to have been highly successful, the cost a mile per season having been reduced from $230 on the average to $50, making it cheaper than water sprinkling alone.

The emulsion, it is declared, keeps the road free from dust for several weeks at a stretch, making only six or seven applications necessary during a season, besides which it is said to have a beneficial effect on the macadam, as it tends to bind the surface together.

NOSE TWEAK COSTS $100.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 21.—President Harry Taylor of the Eastern League, at a league meeting held here yesterday, announced that he had fined Captain Jack Dunn of the Providence team $100, and had suspended him up to and including July 29 for pulling Umpire Moran's nose.

MOTORISTS ON 100-MILE RUN TO QUEBEC TO-DAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

THREE RIVERS, Que., July 21.—The march of the A. A. A. tourists through provincial Canada, from Montreal to the Walled City of Quebec, has been fraught with interest and excitement and replete with incidents demonstrative of the cordial relations which the natives evidently desire shall exist between themselves and those from across the border. All along the route to this point there was awarded a reception and greeting such as the ancients were wont to give to a returning conquering army. Flowers, cheers and everything of a friendly nature were showered upon the Americans.

Every cross road throughout the ninety-five miles of riding had its cortege of villagers, many of whom had traveled miles to see the "horseless carriages" of the wealthy Americans. To them it was the sight of a lifetime to see these modern monsters coming at a rapid rate down the sandy roads, with clouds of dust in their rear. They cheered and cheered. Flowers of every kind were thrown aboard the cars. The display of the British, Canadian and French colors was really wonderful and offered an object lesson on patriotism, at least to the visitors. Grand was this trip from Montreal. The interest displayed reminded me of the experiences on the Boston-New York run and the later Pittsburg trip, some three years ago, when schools and factories en route were closed in order to give all an opportunity to see what could be accomplished in motor propulsion.

Hotels Raise Rates.

There were one or two instances where the grasping proclivities of natives rather detracted from the pleasure of the trip, but that condition of affairs is not confined to Canada, as all through the trip the hotel proprietors have seen fit to materially increase their prices and reduce the "wads" of the tourists. It is surprising how the values of things have increased, such, for instance, as the charging of fifty cents for a passage over the toll bridges. An effort was made in one case to collect $1 for such a privilege, but the motorists got away without settling.

The most unpleasant experience of the day fell to lot of Frank Wing of Boston, who, meeting a farmer on a bridge, was brought to a halt. The latter demanded that Wing back his car off the bridge, which the Bostonian declined to do. The farmer then drew a revolver, but in a moment Wing had jumped from his car and snatched the revolver. Other motorists coming up rushed to King's assistance. The farmer and his team were led off the bridge and Wing is now sporting a revolver of American construction captured from a Canadian. When they show him that gun in the Quebec Citadel, which was captured at Bunker Hill, Wing promises to display the latest trophy of international conflict, if such it can be termed.

The contest for the Glidden trophy is proving a veritable battle of giants, in which ingenuity and generalship, coupled with excellence of machine construction, are prominent factors. The tie which binds the leaders in the Glidden is gradually being weakened. One by one the clean score men are falling by the wayside and secret is the joy of those fortunate in retaining their elevated positions.

Snow of Boston met his Waterloo early yesterday morning while going through a heavy cloud of dust. His car skidded off the road into a ditch and before it could be brought to a standstill he had suffered such injuries as to cause him to withdraw from the contest, although he will continue along as a tourist. This leaves nineteen machines tied for the Glidden. With Snow out of the running, Bostonians must pin their faith on Wing for the Glidden and Coleman for the Deming. The score at the close of yesterday's run was as follows:

All of the men and machines were early on hand to start on the run to Quebec this morning and by 10 o'clock the sixty-six machines which arrived yesterday had departed and should reach Quebec, some ninety-five miles away, by 2 o'clock. The hotel accommodations here were so limited that a large river boat was secured to use as a hotel, fifteen persons sleeping aboard last night, or rather this morning, as an excursion was made up the St. Lawrence.

HOCK KEYES WILL GO AGAINST WELCH

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Hock Keyes of Australia and Freddy Welch of England were to-day matched to fight near Cincinnati on July 27. The contest will be for twenty rounds for a purse of $750, the winner to receive $500 and the loser $250. The agreement calls for Keyes to weigh in at 133 pounds at 6 o'clock on the night of the bout. Welch will be several pounds under this weight.

Both Welch and Keyes have scored six-round draws with Young Erne in bouts in this city. Keyes is now training at Essington, and Welch at a local gymnasium.

The calling off of the Tommy Murphy-Spike Robson bout for next Monday night has been a big disappointment. It is claimed that Robson dislocated his shoulder, but how the accident occurred his manager declines to say. The next show at the National A. C. will be Friday, July 27, when Tommy Murphy will be one of the stars in the windup. The Willie Fitzgerald-Hock Keyes set-to, which was on the carpet for to-night, was postponed, so as not to interfere with the Murphy-Robson affair.

ATHLETES ARE SUSPENDED FOR STRIKING

All the athletes who entered and failed to compete at the Chelsea and Revere Aeries of the Eagles' games held at Oak Island Grove, Revere, last Saturday, were suspended at a meeting of the board of registration of the New England A. A. U. held last evening at the Cambridgeport gymnasium. The secretary, J. Frank Facey, acted as chairman. Other members present were Messrs. Lill and Babb, Joseph B. Maccabe, F. N. McGrath and Thomas Riley.

About 12 of the athletes were present, most of them representing Cambridgeport Gym, St. Alphonsus and St. Joseph's A. A., while the others hailed from smaller organizations.

Frank Ford of the St. Joseph's A. A. seemed to be the spokesman of the athletes, and made a statement for them, saying they had formed an organization for the protection of the amateurs around Boston for the betterment of the prizes.

Ford claims that a good deal of time was spent in training and certain officials were getting a great deal out of the amateur games and the athletes almost nothing.

GAYLORD WILL RACE RUNNERS

Edwin Gaylord, the noted horseman from Denver, Col., who has been prominent in the past years in the Grand Circuit, and one of the foremost promoters of harness horse interests in Denver, has concluded to devote himself only to the runners in the future.

He has sold all of his trotters, with the exception of the M. and M. candidate, Delight, by Allerton, 2:08¼, and will sell her after the big race at Cleveland. The trotter Confienza, 2:12¼, he sold to Irwin brothers, who will race her in the Western Circuit.

INDIAN GREGG BEAT UNHOLZ

OLD ORCHARD, Me., July 21.—Indian Joe Gregg of Spokane, Wash., defeated Rudolph Unholz of South Africa in the first boxing contest ever held in this town. The contest was held in the open air and under the auspices of the Washington Athletic Club, of which William White is the local director. About 500 persons, many of them summer residents and boarders, attended. The natives objected strenuously, but Chief of Police William J. Mewer and the officers did not interfere. Gregg was master of the South African lightweight, who proved strong and rugged. Billy McGuinness of Portsmouth, N. H., was referee.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, July 21.—When it was time for the gates to open the prospects for the first game with the Indians looked very dim as the rain was falling and rapidly wetting down the grounds, making them unfit for the hot battle that was scheduled.

Captain Lajoie was not any too anxious to play considering the crippled state of his team and was perfectly willing to call off hostilities.

The management held off until the last minute before issuing its ultimatum as to the possibility of having a contest.

It was rather a dilapitated band of Indians who lined up with the Pilgrims in the first game of the second series on the home grounds this season.

To be sure, King Lajoie was on deck without any outward signs of having suffered any ailments, but there were several absentees to the regular lineup which spoke volumes for the hard tussles which the Indians had with the Highlanders and were dethroned from their lofty position of second place in the list and worst of all had three other men disabled.

Bill Bradley, Harry Bay and George Stovall made up the trio missing, while the backstop department was almost wiped out so that Malachi Kittredge had to be solicited from the Senators to help out.

It was just about this time last year when the team ran into the hoodoo after making a fine fight to keep up at the top and misfortune followed in bunches.

Under the conditions the home fans saw visions of the Larrupers falling many degrees off the mark from the usual playing and figured on a chance to balance up those four defeats administered the last time the Indians hit the Hub.

TITUS WILL HAVE LIGHTEST SHELL

What promises to be the lighest weight wooden racing single shell ever built is in the course of construction at the loft of A. E. Ward, Highbridge, New York.

The keel of the craft was laid the other day and she is intended for C. S. Titus, the sculler. It is estimated that the boat will weigh, without riggers, sliding seat and the like, less than nineteen pounds. This is a saving of more than seven pounds over the average racing single shell.

The craft is to be of the short variety, twenty-five feet in length, with a "beam" of eleven inches and a depth of six and one-half inches aft, the deepest part. The hull is to be of Spanish cedar, the ribs of hackmatack and the decks of Irish linen. Some of the innovations include aluminum shoes, hollow slits where the oarlocks will fit in, a shorter cockpit than usual and a seat about three-quarters the size of the ordinary sliding seat.

The builder expects to save two pounds in the outriggers and five pounds in the carlins, gunwales, braces, crosspieces and runners for the sliding seat.

A single shell of ordinary build is supposed to weigh a little more than a pound for every foot of its length, and to lop off seven pounds at one swoop where previously the limit was believed to have been reached is a departure of no mean order.

RICE WILLING TO MATCH SUFREET

"I'm willing to accept the challenge to match Chief Wilkie, 2:12¾, against my mare Sufreet, 2:06¼, over the Readville track," said Eddie Rice to-day.

"The defi was given me by Trainer Frank Fox, who claimed he was acting for A. J. Forbush, owner of Chief Wilkie. He informed me there would be nothing to the race, once the word was given, but the pacing gelding. My mare being a back number.

"Possibly this may be true, but being from Missouri, I will have to be shown. The amount of the match will be left to the Forbush contingent so far as I am concerned. I am willing to meet them in the BOSTON AMERICAN office for the purpose of arranging the conditions, and depositing with the sporting editor a forfeit of $100, the remainder decided upon to be put up the day before the race.

"As the challenged one, I want the race three heats in five, mile heats, over the Readville track, to take place next Tuesday or Friday. If weather conditions are bad, the race to be decided the next good day and track.

"In case I do not hear from Mr. Forbush, or his agent Mr. Fox, by Monday evening regarding the match, I shall conclude the proposition made me was in the nature of a joke."

N. Y. ATHLETES AT AUGUSTINE GAMES.

The New York Athletic Club and the Irish American Athletic Club of New York will have a strong representation at St. Augustine's field day next Saturday. Both clubs have promised Jack Mackley, who has charge of the athletic events, that he can have any of their athletes. He has asked the Irish American A. C. for Martin J. and Richard Sheridan for the weight events; Melvin Sheppard for the half mile, Sullivan for the one mile and Bonhag for the two mile running events.

The New York Athletic Club has been asked to send Dennie Horgan, who has held the Irish and English championships at putting the shot for many years, and who held the world's record until Bill Coe broke it at Portland, Ore., last Summer; Paul Pilgrim, winner of the 400 and 800 metres run at the recent Olympian games, and Bill Schick, the captain of Harvard's '05 track team, who is now in training for the national championships.

Rev. M. C. Gilbride has decided not to hold any events for professionals, but to make one big meet of the world's amateur champions and give the people of this vicinity an opportunity of seeing an all-star combination. There will be a champion in every one of the fourteen events on the programme. There will be three prizes given in each event.

The scratch events are as follows: 120 yards high hurdles, 120 yards low hurdles, 20 yards between each hurdle; 880 yards run, two-mile run, throwing 56-pound weight, throwing the discus, 100 yards novice and 440 yards run novice. The handicap events are as follows: 100 yards dash, five yards limit; 440 yards run, 20 yards limit; one mile run, 70 yards limit; running high jump, four inch limit; running hop, step and jump or running two hops and jump, three feet limit, and putting the 16-pound shot with four feet limit. Entries close Monday, July 23, with John F. Mackley, 577 East Eighth street, South Boston.

Dorothy Dix Explains That the Abandonment of the Clever Illusions of Courtship Is the Chief Reason

WHY MARRIED LIFE IS OFTEN DULL

Who Ever Heard of a Tiresome Courtship?

BY DOROTHY DIX

MARRIED life is dull because it is life shorn of illusions. It is beer without the foam, champagne without the fizz and the circus without the hoop-la to give it thrill and fascinate.

It is an indifferent man who does not care whether he pleases or not, tied together by a bond that they lack the energy to gild and the courage to break.

The most idealized and the seldomest realized thing on earth is a home.

There is nothing else about which so many beautiful sentiments cluster as about family life, and there are precious few things that are as hard to endure.

The plain truth is that the average home life of the average family is the abomination of desolation, the quintessence of all that is dull, sordid and commonplace.

The average woman regards matrimony as giving her carte blanche to wear Mother Hubbard wrappers, eat onions and tell her husband home truths.

The average husband considers that the wedding ring gave him license to say things to his wife that he wouldn't dare say to any other woman who had an able-bodied brother.

The average home is a place where everybody comes to dump down the ill-temper and bad manners and surliness that they would not dream of exhibiting in public.

Grunts and Knocks

Social intercourse in the average family is conducted along aboriginal lines of grunts and grumbles and knocks, where nobody takes the trouble to spare another's feelings.

Is it any wonder that a man flies from home as soon as he can get his dinner of an evening on the pretext of business or sitting up with a sick friend, or that the children break away from it as soon as they are able, or that the bitterest complaint of the domestic woman is that she has no latchkey?

And the pity of it is that it is all so unnecessary. It is a tragedy wrought out of the fact that men and women do not understand that when you rob life of its graces, its illusions, its poetry and its charm, you have taken everything which makes it attractive and left it bare and repulsive.

If a man and a woman revealed themselves to each other before marriage in the guise they do afterward there would be very few marriages.

No young woman could be induced to come down into the parlor to see her best beau, with her hair done up in curl papers and her shirtwaist gaping in the back.

No young man would go a-wooing with a dirty collar and a three days' stubble of beard on his face.

On the contrary, both youth and maiden put on their most attractive attire, and by means of curling and crimping and barbering seek to gain favor in each other's eyes.

Oh, What a Change!

But what a change matrimony makes! The woman becomes frowsy; the man slouchy in dress.

Temper and tongue have free rein.

Conversation becomes a sparring match, in which each tries for the other's weak spot.

Neither husband nor wife seems to feel that there is the slightest necessity of trying to please each other.

They have taken each other for better or worse, and they are determined to make it as "worse" as they can.

If people were married for one year, or two, one could understand the recklessness with which so many husbands and wives deal with each other's affections, but this is not true.

There is no time limit on the average marriage except death.

Nobody ever complains that courtship is dull. A man finds it thrilling to spend an evening in the society of a woman who is putting forth every art to allure him.

He takes her to dinner and she beams across the table. He takes her to the theatre and she thrills responsive to his every thought.

Life is filled for them with circling wings and golden glory because they see it through the mists of illusion.

They marry.

They strip the illusions from life.

They still have the same means of amusing themselves.

They have unlimited opportunities for companionship.

The restaurants and theatres are doing business at the same old stand, but they find it all deadly dull, because they are no longer trying to fascinate each other or even to keep each other in love. It is the same old life, only they have stopped crying "Hoop-la!" as they jump through the rings, and the snap has gone out of the show.

And the pity of it is that they might have kept up the interest in it to the end if they had only preserved the illusions of life.

HOW TO HAVE A SMALL WAIST

THE wasp waist, which is fashion's decree again, if properly developed is not as injurious as some of the ever-ready croakers would have us believe. On the contrary, it is as it should be.

Try this. Plant the feet firmly on the floor and stand naturally. Now pull the chest up and without moving the shoulders unnecessarily draw yourself out of the skirt band, still keeping the feet on the floor. Wriggle out of it, the band, and there you are. The abdomen is down where it belongs, the chest, stomach, lungs and all organs have found their proper resting place, and, frankly, isn't it the most comfortable position you've found yet? Yet the waist is quite a bit smaller, is tapering and is or will soon become quite what Madame Fashion dictates.

TO SERVE WITH MEATS

Wholesome Hot Weather Goodies Are Easily Prepared from Nuts

THE value of nuts as a substantial food is appreciated by very few people. They are put on the table and eaten as dessert when the appetite is already satisfied, and so only serve to overcrowd the digestive organs.

They are a solid food with a large proportion of nutritive quality and may be used as a staple article of diet to take the place of meat. In warm weather they will be found an especially good substitute, for in the hot months the wise people are those who refrain from eating flesh food, and live on fruit, nuts, vegetables and cereals.

NUT LOAF

ONE cup English walnuts or hickory nuts; one cup entire wheat bread crumbs; one cup milk or cream, two eggs, and chop the nuts fine; mix all together thoroughly, and make into a loaf.

Bake in half an hour; use crackers instead of bread crumbs and the same recipe makes delicious croquettes.

NUT CUP CAKE

ONE and a half cups of sugar, half a cup of nut butter that has been thoroughly mixed with the same quantity of water; three-quarters of a cup of water, three eggs, three cups of flour, a little salt, and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat the sugar and butter together. Beat the whites and yolks of eggs separately. Add the beaten yolks to the butter and sugar and then add the beaten whites.

Sift the flour thoroughly and add to the mixture. Bake in layers if desired, and more shortening may be added if a rich cake is preferred.

NUT HASH

ONE cup raw peanuts chopped or ground; one cup bread crumbs (entire wheat); one cup potatoes chopped; one cup milk; one egg. Brown in skillet half an hour; this is delicious with jam or jelly.

NUT CROQUETTE

MIX a pound of English walnuts ground, with a teaspoonful of salt and juice of half a lemon, and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Put together two tablespoonfuls of flour and one of butter. Thicken a cup of boiling milk with this; season and mix with the nut mixture and a well-beaten egg; set to cool. Form into small rolls, dip in egg and cracker crumbs and fry quickly a light brown.

NUT SANDWICHES

TAKE one cup of peanuts rolled fine, stir half a teaspoonful of butter with the yolk of a hard-boiled egg to a cream; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful lemon juice, a tablespoonful of cream or milk and the finely chopped white of the egg; a cupful of finely chopped apples may be added just before the mixture is put between thin slices of bread.

ALMOND MACAROONS

HALF a pound of sweet almonds, a coffee cupful of white sugar, the whites of two eggs; blanch the almonds and pound them to a paste; add to them the sugar and the beaten whites of eggs; work the whole together with the back of a spoon, then roll the mixture in your hands in balls about the size of a nutmeg; dust sugar over the top, lay them on a sheet of paper at least an inch apart. Bake in a cool oven a light brown.

ORANGE COCOANUT SALAD

PEEL and slice a dozen oranges, grate a cocoanut and slice a pineapple; put alternate layers of each until the dish is full; then pour over them sweetened wine; serve with small cakes.

When oranges are served whole they should be peeled and prettily arranged in a fruit dish. A small knife is best for this purpose. Break the skin from the stem into six or eight even parts, peel each section down half way and tuck the point in next to the orange.

AND Bougelstein, whose purpose the boy had already served—since he knew that Mr. Parslow was the gentleman selected to convey the plunder to Amsterdam, and no doubt had the stone with him—released Jim, grinning inwardly; was there ever such luck in the world?

Perhaps the white-haired gentleman had expected it; Jim, as he felt the grasp relax, instead of taking the kindly advice to return home, took to his heels in the opposite direction leaving his cap in Mr. Parslow's hand.

"Ah, he hasn't taken my advice, the foolish boy," murmured that kind-hearted man, his fingers lovingly pressing the little hard, bead-like substance they could feel in the lining of the cap.

"Very ungrateful of him!" said Bougelstein, stepping as if inadvertently in front of Mr. Parslow, while Hume, a powerfully built man, obeying a telegraphed signal his eyes flashed to him, moved to the back of the Bensonhurst gentleman.

"Well, good night, my friends, said Mr. Parslow briskly.

A Quick Move

Perhaps it was instinct that warned him of something suspicious or possibly he saw a shadow cast on the roadway by the glimmering street lamp behind him. For, as he spoke, Mr. Parslow, with a quickness of movement hardly to be expected of one of his years, leaped suddenly aside, ducking his head.

He was just, and only just, in time. The man behind him had swung something that he held through the air, intending to bring it down on Parslow's head; a bag, not more than fifteen inches long, and about as thick as a man's wrist, filled with sand.

Parslow's quick movement disconcerted him in the very act of striking, and caused him to urch forward a little. The sandbag descended heavily—not on the white-haired gentleman, but on the head of Bougelstein—unprotected except by a cap—who had been standing immediately in front of Parslow.

Bougelstein fell to the ground without even a cry, and there he lay stunned.

The same instant Parslow, who seemed to be an exceedingly wide-awake gentleman, and accustomed, perhaps, from the nature of his calling to take care of himself, swung round and faced Hume. Not weaponless. His hand had darted to an inner pocket, and was grasping a very serviceable-looking revolver; the muzzle of it almost touched Hume's breast.

"Now, you scoundrel," said Parslow in sharp, incisive tones, his finger on the trigger, "I should be quite safe from unpleasant consequences if I pulled the trigger. Your sandbag would be sufficient evidence that I had shot you in self-defence."

Hume was utterly taken aback. He dropped the sandbag and dashed off. Mr. Parslow looked, with a smile, after the running figure, and thence to the recumbent form of Mr. Isidore Bougelstein lying stunned in the shadow by the monument. The whole affair had taken place so quickly and silently that no one had so far appeared on the scene.

Luck with Him

"No need to be mixed up in an unpleasant affair," Mr. Parslow murmured to himself, as he put away his revolver.

Without even glancing again at the fallen man, he walked briskly off.

"Disgraceful condition our streets are in when one can be attacked in this manner, so close to a main thoroughfare," he said, as he hurried away. "Considering the heavy taxes we pay, we ought at least to have efficient police protection from such ruffians."

He walked briskly till he reached where a policeman stood at a corner of a street and people were passing. Then as he walked along the white-haired gentleman cautiously felt in the lining of the boy's cap that he still carried and withdrew the hard, pebbly substance he had felt. Unostentatiously he dropped the cap through some railings, and by the light of a street lamp gave a furtive glance at the object he held in the palm of his hand.

A glance satisfied him. With a smile on his benevolent face Mr. Parslow walked to the "L" station with the Mirror of the Moon safely reposing in his waistcoat pocket.

It was the last intention in his mind to acquaint Rumfit & Co. of his discovery.

"It will be a salutary lesson to them, I hope, to be more careful about valuables in future," he murmured, as his mind lingered on that moral aspect of the case. "But it won't be wise for me to go over to Amsterdam for a few days. Marr is a suspicious man and if his suspicions were aroused as to my treasure trove he might resort to violence. Very bad temper he has! I hope the poor lad won't catch cold without his cap. Fortunately it is a warm night."

CHAPTER LXXIV.
Raising the Veil

"ARMADALE, I wish you'd let me help you," said Herries again earnestly. Delamere had gone; Herries and the man to whom he owed Delamere's discomfiture were sitting out on the lawn under the shadow of the trees. "I am too much in your debt to mince matters from any feeling of false delicacy. You spoke of your old ambitions this afternoon, Armadale, there's a career for you yet, if you could only find strength to resist that failing of yours. And I want to help you to resist it."

Armadale shook his head. There was a touch of cynicism in his smile; but he was touched by Herries's words.

"It's good of you, Herries, but I'm a hopeless case. To-day I'm sober; to-day I feel that I could promise all sorts of impossible things—but in my heart I know they are impossible. And those ambitions you speak of—the fires are all dead."

"I won't believe it. I won't believe but that you are man enough to make a fight, to conquer what you admit has been your curse. And I want to help you to do it," said Herries. "Come here as my guest, stay as long as you like, and we'll fight the thing out together. The mere change will lift you out of yourself; you will have the opportunity of leaving hack work that is unworthy of you, of devoting yourself to really good work——"

"If only I could feel as hopeful," said Armadale, slowly. "Here, if anywhere, in this beautiful spot, I could feel some stirring of the old ambitions, the old impulses. But I know myself. The taint's in my blood. My father drank himself to death and it was the one tangible legacy he left me, an inordinate thirst," he added with a little grim smile.

"I mean to help you in spite of yourself," said Herries persistently. "I have the idea that if we could get you interested again in your work you wouldn't find the struggle hopeless."

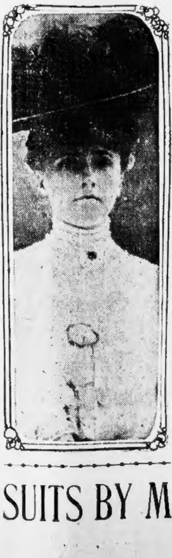
THE ORIGINAL OF THIS PHOTO WINS A PRIZE

Identify This Snapshot and You Receive $2



DID you see the BOSTON AMERICAN camera man in the shopping district this morning? No? Well, he might have seen you, just the same.

Maybe he snapped you on the street. He's apt to get you any day. If he happened to catch you this morning your picture will surely be on this page Monday. Watch out for it.

Here's the photograph of a woman shopper which he got yesterday. Whose picture is it? Do you know her? If you do, tell her to drop down to the BOSTON AMERICAN office and get the crisp $2 bill which is awaiting her.

Tell her, too, that the original photograph will be handed to her, as a souvenir of a lucky shopping expedition.

All she has to do is to identify the snap shot and the reward is hers. If she can't call, tell her to send along her photo and a check will be mailed promptly to her address.

Meanwhile—WATCH OUT FOR THE CAMERA MAN!

TASTE COUNTS MOST IN DRESS

MONEY is by no means as essential as taste in regard to dress, and the girl of small income with the latter quality will present a far better appearance than she who has much more to spend on such things.

For one reason economy prompts more care and thought in choice of frocks and their adjuncts, for the girl of slender means knows that she must expend her money to the best advantage, while the girl who is lavish will buy and buy, wear for a day and fling away the next, with a recklessness which the well-dressed, whether rich or poor, never show.

It is enough to glance at the occupants of beautifully appointed carriages to realize that money and good taste in dress are often far apart. Some women, devoid of the faculty of dressing well, place themselves with good results in the hands of their dressmakers. The owner of natural taste in garbing herself will exercise it with comparatively small cost, if economy is necessary, by planning her toilettes skilfully. Of course, she who owns both taste and money is a happy individual.

How Many Hours Should a Woman Give to Sleep?

THERE are a few women who get more sleep than they really need, and as a result are always stupid and indolent, taking no interest in their work or social life, but dragging out an existence that seems a burden to them, and all because they rest so long that the organs of digestion grow defective from lack of proper care and the absence of the right kind of exercise.

How long a woman should sleep each night depends upon the kind of work she does, and upon temperament. If she is nervous, more rest and sleep are required than for one of a phelgmatic nature, according to a physician who has specialized along these lines.

The number of hours of sleep a woman or man gets is usually a habit governed by their mode of living, she says, and for this reason one can easily regulate the time to have sufficient rest.

Preparing for Sleep

Going to sleep should be prepared for, especially if a woman is nervous, and an hour or two before retiring only such thoughts as are restful and have a quieting effect on the mind should be indulged in.

All business troubles and worries should be left in the office, and for the evening an entire change of surroundings and thoughts should be had, because they afford recreation, and, if the right kind, induce a state of mind that makes sleep the natural consequence. Often a concert or the theatre, providing it is not a play that excites a person, gives diversion and makes rest more welcome.

One of the best things to do before going to bed is to sit down and read a book that holds the interest, yet does not cause any nervousness because of a deeply laid plot or exciting expose.

If a woman finds difficulty in getting to sleep, a warm bath just before turning in is quieting to the nerves, and there is no better remedy for sleeplessness than to sip—not drink—a glass of warm milk.

Frequently this wakefulness is caused by cold feet, and if this is the case a hot bath for them, vigorous rubbing, some simple exercise, such as shaking the foot or jumping, will get up circulation and the flesh will gradually become warm; or a hot water bottle might be put to the feet.

Never go hungry to bed, for it is not only a bad thing for the health, but often is so annoying that sleep is next to impossible, and when it does come is not refreshing, because the desire for food makes the individual restless. As to the food eaten before retiring, it should be of the lightest—crackers and milk or a cereal and milk, but never salads, meats, vegetables, cake, coffee, etc., for that is too much of a tax on the organs of digestion.

Hours for Sleep

The accepted time for sleep is eight hours, and for the average individual this is enough, but if less is needed then the extra time can be spent in some profitable way, while if nine or ten hours are required they should be taken, even if the recreation period has to be cut short. A woman who does not get enough sleep is not only never a success in business, but is irritable in her home, and undoubtedly is encouraging mental breakdown and nervous prostration, either of which is bound to follow in time.

The amount of sleep needed depends largely upon the work done during the day. If it is mental, more rest should be taken, for with physical labor the body may be more wearied, but it recuperates much more quickly than the brain. A woman who is nervous needs from two to three hours more each night than one who is not, especially if her business keeps her working at high tension, yet few excitable persons ever get enough sleep, for it seems almost impossible for them to stay quiet a sufficient length of time to be properly rested.

Position in sleeping is another habit. Some women prefer to lie flat on their backs without even a pillow beneath their heads, their arms straight at their sides. This attitude is commendable, for it insures a straight figure and an erect carriage, though some persons declare that it induces heavy breathing or snoring, because the mouth is liable to open. It has this advantage, too, that the organs are all in their normal places just as when we stand erect.

Another good way to sleep is on the right side, and this is supposed to be really better than on the left side, which might cause a congestion of blood in the heart.

Persons suffering from asthma should have a high pillow for comfort, though the average woman usually selects a medium sized or small and soft cushion for a head rest.

One attitude that should be guarded against, because it makes the heart do more work, is lying with the hands above the head. At night, when asleep, the heart's action is not so strenuous as during the day time, and every aid to help it to rest should be given, so instead of placing the arms over the head, making the work of supplying blood to all parts of the body harder, they should be kept at the sides, and as this is only a habit it can be easily cured by a little thought.

TO TEST AN EGG

IF you wish to know if an egg is fresh, place it in a basin of cold water. If it remains at the bottom it is all right; if it floats at all it is of rather doubtful freshness; and if it floats gaily on the surface you may be certain it is quite bad.

NEW BOOKS

HANDY POCKET DIRECTORY.

FOUR hundred thousand American periodicals are neatly tabulated in the latest directory of the American Press issued in pocket edition by Lord & Thomas of New York and Chicago. In addition, all of the leading Canadian publications are arranged in a separate list, as well as the growing catalogue of class publications and trade journals. An unique feature of the directory is a classified list of the publications in Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

In each case, in addition to the name and circulation of the periodical, is given the population of the town in which it is published, the extent of its legitimate circulation territory, its actual paid circulation and its political complexion.

THE CITY THAT WAS

WHEN the writer of this meagre notice read a descriptive story of San Francisco as that city was before it was blotted out by earthquake and flame, in a New York newspaper, he said:

"By George, the fellow who wrote that story knew San Francisco."

The story appeared shortly after the great Pacific slope disaster, with date line and without signature. It was a bang-up, white-hot piece of writing that made the reader in general and the newspaper writer in particular sit up and take notice.

This little masterpiece has been published in a dainty volume under the title, "The City That Was; A Requiem of San Francisco," by B. W. Huebsch, of New York. Through this publication the fact becomes public that the word-painter of the vivid picture of the beloved city is Will Irwin, who has since become the managing editor of McClure's Magazine.

POLICE TRAIL NEW CLUE IN BOY MURDER

Ask Delay of Inquest and Look for Startling Light on Tragedy.

ANSWER NOT YET RECEIVED

GREAT BARRINGTON, July 21.—On account of startling new evidence discovered by the local and State police, the State officers have requested a postponement of the inquest, which was to be held to-day in the mysterious murder of twelve-year-old John Streub. The police say it will require two days more to fully investigate a new and important clue.

It is now established beyond a doubt that John Streub was murdered early Tuesday morning and not a great distance from the place where his body was concealed.

The deed was committed in broad daylight and within a quarter of a mile of the traveled road and many houses. The circumstances would indicate that the man who struck the fatal blows was left-handed and that the instrument used was a metal one, which crushed small bones in the skull.

Emil Streub, the father, was carefully questioned again last night by the detectives, who were endeavoring to find out where he was between the hours of 8:30 and 10 o'clock. About 10 o'clock Tuesday morning he went into Buck's saloon and drank two glasses of beer. The bartender says that he came up the road which leads past the woods. After having his drinks he went home.

$25 SHORT, JOHN D. JR., GIVES $20

Fourth of July Committee Gets Part of the Deficit Made Up.

BEVERLY FARMS, July 20.—A Fourth of July committee which asked John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for $25 to supply a shortage in the committee's funds to settle for the recent celebration, received $20. The $5 balance the committee made up out of its own pocket.

This Fourth of July celebration is paid for by subscription among the wealthy cottagers. When the bills came in this year the committee found its donations $25 too small. Mr. Rockefeller had not been called on to subscribe. So the committee thought it a good chance to give him opportunity to join in the general contribution. The committee called, but was denied by Mr. Rockefeller's representative.

The next day, however, the committee was pleased to have a call from Mr. Rockefeller's secretary, who asked how much the shortage was. The committee gladly told him it was $25.

The next day the committee received a letter from Mr. Rockefeller. It contained a check. Eagerly the check was read. It was for $20.

Whereupon the committee turned the $20 into the general funds and "dug" in its own pockets for the $5 still lacking.

GUARD HARTJE CHILDREN FROM KIDNAP PLOT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 21.—Charges of crooked methods, made by both sides, was a feature at the sensational Hartje divorce trial yesterday. An apparent series of legal victories for Mrs. Hartje also marked the session and culminated in the admission of the confessions of Clifford Hooe, the negro coachman, in which he is said to have declared that he lied when he swore to impropriety with the respondent.

Another phase of the trouble came yesterday when the Philadelphia police warned those here that a plot to kidnap the Hartje children had been discovered. The boy and girl now are under guard.

A desperate effort to steal the notes of Judge Robert S. Frazer, on the Hartje case, was frustrated yesterday.

SUSPEND OFFICIALS ON CRUELTY CHARGE

CINCINNATI, July 21.—The city Board of Public Service has suspended Superintendent James Allison and Assistant Superintendent Peter Costello of the House of Refuge, a municipal reformatory and charitable institution, pending investigation of charges made in the press and elsewhere of extreme cruelty to boys and girls, inmates of that institution.

$5 DOWN, $1 PER WEEK

The lot of pianos must and will be sold at the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms to settle up unpaid accounts; nearly every standard make on hand; Ivers & Pond, Hallet & Davis, Chickering and Merrill, are in mahogany and walnut cases, 3 pedals and in first-class condition, two pianos for one, reasons why, expenses to Roxbury hardly noticed, expenses in Boston, $200 to $300 daily; nearly every make to select from, good uprights, $40, $50, $60, $65 and $75, squares $10, $15 and $20; why pay more? Several new pianos, the stock of a first-class piano maker gone out of business, which will be sold at a sacrifice; don't fail to call and secure one; greatest chance ever offered; the canvasser, agent and music teacher will tell you to keep away from us; reason why, we don't pay commissions; you get the benefit by our low prices; see for yourself, examine our nice stock.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Why pay $200 more for a piano because it is on a polished floor? See us, nearly every make in stock, at the lowest possible prices and on very easy terms; 10 years' guarantee, stool and scarf with every piano, free delivery everywhere in unmarked wagons; goods guaranteed as represented or money refunded, entrance will be where you see the red flag; sale positive all the week; open Sat. eve. till 9 P. What Mr. Roosevelt Wants to Do

At the End of This Term — SENATOR. After That, PRESIDENT ONCE MORE. That Is His Plan

There is speculation concerning Mr. Roosevelt's intentions regarding another presidential term.

Mr. John Sharp Williams, leader in the House of the Democratic minority—WHICH HE HAS HELPED TO MAKE VERY SMALL INDEED—sailed for Europe the other day with a parting sneer at Mr. Roosevelt's good faith. He expressed his belief that the President was insincere and was trying to arrange matters so that he would be forced to run for a third term in spite of his pledge to the contrary.

Mr. Roosevelt is NOT insincere. No honest man who knows him would say that of him.

He IS impulsive. He sometimes deceives himself. He DOES make positive assertions, and sometimes forgets them. He is like every man who talks impulsively—he cannot possibly do all that he says he will do.

But he is a SINCERE man. He was sincere when he said just after his election that he would not be a candidate for a third term. And he is sincere about that now.

Our opinion is that, IN SPITE OF HIMSELF, matters and events will compel him to take a third successive nomination.

He represents after all, and in spite of his efforts to seem something else, the great financial interests of the country. He is the head of a party WHICH THOSE GREAT INTERESTS OWN. He is a rebellious manager of the plutocratic party at times, but in the long run things go on AS THE FINANCIAL OWNERS OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WISH THEM TO GO.

The trusts—at least a majority of them—are not VERY fond of Theodore Roosevelt. They feel that they OWN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY BECAUSE THEY HAVE FINANCED IT FOR SO LONG, and that Mr. Roosevelt, as a Republican, does not play quite fair.

But at the same time they would far rather have Mr. Roosevelt than another kind of man in the White House.

There looms up before them in national politics a figure that they don't care for AT ALL. Our readers can identify a personality that worries the trusts and makes even the aggressive Roosevelt seem a most pleasant alternative.

Mr. Roosevelt's own schemes do not include the taking of a third presidential term IN 1908.

But if the trusts find themselves menaced with a man REALLY DANGEROUS TO THEIR PLANS OF PIRACY, if they realize that the people have reached a point where they will sweep aside the dummies of the Democratic party whom the trusts own and PUT A REAL DEMOCRAT IN OFFICE, then they will struggle to hold on to Theodore Roosevelt. AND WE THINK THAT THEY WILL SUCCEED IN HOLDING ON TO HIM, and nominating him for a third successive term.

Naturally, it will not be difficult to persuade Mr. Roosevelt that it is his solemn duty "to serve the people."

If persuaded by the trusts, speaking through such men as Root and others who influence him, Mr. Roosevelt will run again in 1908.

But that is not Mr. Roosevelt's PRESENT plan. We are able to tell our readers exactly what he does plan to do. And we believe that Mr. Loeb, who contradicts things for the President, will not contradict this.

Mr. Roosevelt's plan is to finish this term and then go into the United States Senate, representing the State of New York in the place of Platt or Depew. He knows—or at least believes—that he can manage that easily.

He expects to spend three and a half or four years in the Senate, talking, working as energetically as he can, AND THEN IN 1912 TO ACCEPT A NOMINATION FOR THE PRESIDENCY AGAIN, as a sort of intermittent pere du peuple (that means father of the people).

His feeling is that the objection to a third term IS AN OBJECTION TO THREE SUCCESSIVE TERMS.

He feels that the example set by Washington and followed by Jefferson was intended to prevent a man FROM REMAINING PERMANENTLY IN THE WHITE HOUSE AND GRADUALLY DEVELOPING INTO A KING.

He thinks the American system will be protected and the ideas of Washington and Jefferson respected if a man, after two terms in the White House, shall allow an interval to elapse and then go up for election a third time.

Just what the American people will think of this we do not know. We believe that we have told you—just for your information—exactly what Mr. Roosevelt's plans are now, so far as he knows them.

On a Backyard Farm

Dogs, Cats, Children and Cucumbers

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE

THERE are differences between plant and animal life which the backyard farmer learns as he goes along—usually too late.

For example, dogs become attached to persons, while cats and children become attached to places. Thoroughly domesticate a child and he will become as devoted to your dooryard as a good, first-class cat. There are tramp children, to be sure; so are there tramp cats, but, as a rule, you will find that a child that is fed with some regularity and given a few smaller children to bully will not permanently leave the premises except for circuses or street pianos.

With vegetables it is entirely different. Take the case of cucumbers. Cucumbers in the vine state, although keeping up a fraudulent appearance of being clinging young things, have no real affection either for places or persons. Nor have they any sense of limitations or the fitness of things.

My cucumber vines left the premises the day before yesterday and went across three lots to the back porch of a neighbor, where they laid violent hold of a milk pitcher reposing on the top of a refrigerator. Why they chose a milk pitcher is one of those awful phenomena which the student of nature gazes upon abashed and with a sense of his own ineffable littleness. But a milk pitcher it was, and such was the serpentine grip of the cucumber tendrils about it that when the Little Boy stumbled over the middle breadths of the vine the pitcher, milk and all came hurtling over into our yard.

Our neighbors were annoyed at this, and requested us to keep our cucumber vines at home. In all sincerity we tried to, but last night the vine had another session with the wanderlust, and the wanderlust won.

This time it hauled its course and swarmed up the waterspout surreptitiously, and feloniously entered the bathroom between the hours of 1:30 and 4 a. m.

Here it singled out a bottle of gasoline for its loathsome embraces, and got a strangle hold on it. Along toward morning a breeze came up, caught the pendent portion of the vine, and carried away the gasoline bottle, which was shattered on the floor.

The Little Boy awoke the family with the awestruck announcement that he smelled an automobile in the bathroom, which seemed so improbable that we investigated. The vine was just retreating shamefacedly out of the window as we entered the room, and by breakfast time was charging madly off in the direction of the grocery boy's bicycle, whose glittering spokes had attracted its predatory attention.

This afternoon my neighbor to the rear came over to see me. "If you don't keep that infernal thieving cucumber vine of yours in your own yard," he said, "I'll send for the poundmaster. It's been in my kitchen and took the waffle iron off the stove. It's there now, hunting around to find the flatirons. I've threw it out three times, and it's came back every time, and got something else. I s'pose you'd stand by and let it get my children and never lift a hand to stop it."

My neighbor was plaintly nettled. As I am not fond of cucumbers, I shall devote my attention hereafter to something else. Cucumbers are not wholesome, anyway.

Sun, Air and Earth Are God's Gifts to All, and Even Criminals Should Not Be Deprived of Them

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

HOW surely and beautifully this world moves toward higher knowledge of truth and kindness.

Never was there such promise of the hoped-for millennium as now.

Yes, now, while the air is full of reports of evil, of robbery and bribery and crime of all kinds, does the dawn of the greatest spiritual era of earth seem near.

Only a hundred years ago our poor insane invalids were incarcerated in dungeons and subjected to most cruel treatment.

Science and humanitarianism have progressed to a wonderful degree in the last hundred years, and now comes a most humane proposition from Mr. George Sanders, of No. 1866 Pacific street, Brooklyn, as follows:

> After consulting with friends, doctors, nurserymen and others, I have been moved to submit to the State Board of Commissioners on Lunacy a plan of developing ten acres or so of land belonging to each State hospital into a fruit garden.
>
> This garden would supply the hospital with a large quantity and variety of fruits and also prove of great value to the many patients who could be employed in the garden, thus giving them outdoor exercise which would prove so interesting that it would be the means of restoring many a mind to its normal condition.

A Step Ahead

THE idea is admirable. I hope it will meet with encouragement and assistance from every State in the Union.

From dark dungeons and chains, neglect and abuse, out to heaven's sunlight, with nature and medical science to assist in the restoration of the mind; surely this shows progress in our idea of duty toward the insane since the days of our great-grandfathers.

Now let the same methods be applied when possible to the other invalids of the land—the criminally insane.

For all crime is some phase of insanity.

No man who has committed a crime will be reformed and made into a sane, moral and law-abiding citizen if he is shut in for years between cold walls, away from all contact with nature, and given the association of other unfortunates for companionship.

Sun, Air and Earth

SUN, air, earth—they are three great ministers for sick and diseased souls and bodies.

They will do more toward reformation and restoration than the cell, solitary confinement and the lash. More than pills and powders and opiates. More than preachers and sermons.

Heaven speed the day when all the little children cooped up in city tenements, when weary mothers and worn-out workmen will have the benefit of God's beautiful earth and the sunshine and the fresh air a portion of every day.

There is room for all; the blessed trolley lines are making transportation possible at small cost, and the time is coming when our congested cities will and must empty out their fetid alleys and give the unconscious prisoners of toil better conditions.

When this is done, then will insanity and crime be lessened and the need of asylums and prisons reduced to a minimum.

The sun, the air, the earth! They are God's gifts to all men.

No system of government is right or just which takes these things from any class and compels it to exist without them.

The Call of the Fields

By Harry B. Metcalf

THE clovered fields of rippling green
  Cry "Health to him who comes!"
Ah, sad are they who ne'er have seen
  The clovered fields of rippling green—
Canst thou not make a day serene
  For some child of the slums?
The clovered fields of rippling green
  Cry "Health to him who comes!"

Little Editorials from the People

"WHAT IS WRONG WITH OUR BALL TEAM?"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Rev. Charles A. Crane did not get at the bottom of the baseball matter. He says the trouble is:

Ten parts headlessness.
Ten parts hitlessness.
Ten parts slowness.
Ten parts teamlessness.
Twenty parts hopelessness.

I have made up my mind there is no better team in America if they will take heed to a few things and go on with their work. Let them take care of their habits of eating and drinking and resting. No one can convince me that they can be at their best with their habits. I watched them closely the other day in their exercises before the game began, and one of them used enough tobacco in that hour to turn the head of an ordinary person. I am aware that tobacco has different effects on different people, but I venture, if you study the different men, you will find that it is a damage to nine men out of ten.

Let our team get into better habits and more temperate ways and you will see them begin to climb to the top.
